

£16 million for new projects to boost UK benefits of satellite constellations

Two innovative projects are awarded a share of £16 million from the UK Space Agency today (3 February) to position the UK at the forefront of the latest advancements in satellite communications.