

£20 million investment for hypersonic target to test air defence systems and boost British small businesses

British small businesses will help develop a hypersonic 'clay pigeon' target, a vehicle intended to represent threats capable of travelling at five times the speed of sound, under a new £20m investment announced today.