

£708 million to accelerate UK next-generation air combat technology

Thousands of British workers will accelerate development of advanced technologies for use by the Royal Air Force, following a £708 million investment announced today.