

Adults locked out of learning to access education with new reform

Government announces first 130 universities and colleges approved to offer new bite-sized courses, with applications opening this September.