

In Jordan, refugees scan irises to collect aid. But is it ethical?

Wed, 2022-12-14 23:43

AZRAQ, Jordan: At a grocery store checkout in the Jordanian refugee camp of Azraq, Sameera Sabbouh stares wide-eyed into a scanner to pay for her shopping – her iris scan unlocking payment from a digital aid account with the help of block- chain technology.

Many of the nearly 40,000 Syrians who live in the camp recognize the convenience of the cashless, card-free payment method, which verifies recipients' identity by referencing a UN database, but few said they like it.

UN and Arab agencies praise Kuwaiti authorities for consumer protection efforts

Tue, 2022-12-13 23:41

KUWAIT: The UN Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia and the Arab Competition Network have congratulated Kuwaiti authorities on their efforts to protect consumers against commercial fraud.

The organizations said the measures they introduced have helped to create effective and beneficial competition, the Kuwait News Agency reported on Tuesday.

Kuwait's Competition Protection Agency has made significant progress in the past decade in its efforts to "regulate the local market," Natalya Khaled, ESCWA's economic affairs chief, said during a two-day conference.
