Restaurant at Kam Tin Yuen Long convicted for excessive wastewater discharge

Wealth Banquet, a restaurant at Kam Tin Main Road in Yuen Long, discharged sub-standard wastewater into nearby drains and violated the requirements of the wastewater discharge licence. The restaurant was fined $10,000 by Fanling Magistrates' Courts today (May 29) for contravening the Water Pollution Control Ordinance (WPCO).

The Environmental Protection Department (EPD) enforcement officers conducted a blitz inspection at Kam Tin Yuen Long last October and found that turbid wastewater was being discharged from the grease trap of the aforementioned restaurant. It was suspected that the wastewater had not been properly treated before being discharging into the communal drain. The EPD officers then collected wastewater samples for analysis and the results showed that the oil and grease, suspended solids and biochemical oxygen demand in the wastewater exceeded the wastewater discharge licence limits by two to four times. After evidence gathering, the EPD initiated prosecution against the licensee in accordance with the WPCO.

The EPD spokesman said that the location concerned is an unsewered area. Anyone who discharges sub-standard wastewater into a communal drain will pollute nearby waterways and adversely affect the environment and public hygiene. The spokesman reminded the responsible persons of restaurants that they must properly repair and maintain wastewater treatment facilities and strictly adhere to the discharge standards as stipulated in the licence to prevent environmental pollution.

Under the WPCO, anyone who discharges wastewater which exceeds the standards of the discharge licence into a communal drain commits an offence. First-time offenders are liable to a maximum fine of $200,000 and six months' imprisonment.

Non-registered contractor and property owner convicted for illegal demolition of asbestos roofs

A non-registered contractor for a village house at Tai Yuen Tsuen in Sheung Shui Wai and a property owner of Po Lun House at Portland Street in Mong Kok, who illegally removed asbestos roofs, were convicted today (May 29) at Fanling Magistrates' Courts and on May 24 at Kwun Tong Magistrates' Courts respectively, for contravening the Air Pollution Control Ordinance (APCO). These two cases were fined a total of $34,000.

An Environmental Protection Department (EPD) spokesman said that complaints were received last November and December about the illegal demolition of asbestos sheeting at a village house at Tai Yuen Tsuen in Sheung Shui Wai and a residential flat at Po Lun House at Portland Street in Mong Kok respectively. The EPD conducted investigations and found that the asbestos removal works at both locations were not carried out in accordance with the statutory requirements, as no registered asbestos contractors were hired to conduct the removal works and the EPD had not been notified prior to the commencement of the works. After evidence collection, the EPD initiated prosecutions against the contractor and the property owner under the APCO.

The spokesman said that, to safeguard public health, asbestos abatement works at village houses or residential buildings must be carried out by a registered asbestos contractor in accordance with the statutory requirements and the code of practice on asbestos control to prevent the release of asbestos fibres from affecting the workers and public health. Offenders are liable to a maximum fine of $200,000 and six months' imprisonment. Anyone failing to give not less than 28 days' written notice to the EPD of the commencement date of the asbestos abatement work is also liable to a maximum fine of $200,000.
