

Remarks by SLW on Productivity Enhancement Programme

Following are the remarks by the Secretary for Labour and Welfare, Mr Chris Sun, on the Productivity Enhancement Programme at a media session after attending a radio programme this morning (March 5):

Reporter: Good morning, Mr Sun. Will the 7 per cent funding cut to social welfare organisations affect their services? And also, you had a meeting with the representatives on Monday, did they propose any suggestions to share their financial burden with the Government?

Secretary for Labour and Welfare: Thank you. Under the Productivity Enhancement Programme just announced by the Financial Secretary in his Budget, all envelope holders, including me, have to deliver by the year 2027-28 a cumulative reduction of 7 per cent. That means I have to work together and discuss with the 170-odd NGOs (non-governmental organisations) to make sure that we can deliver that target. In coming up with our proposal, I have tried my very best to absorb the farthest possible reduction through the Social Welfare Department.

But given the magnitude of the reduction, it is just not possible for the department itself to absorb all the reduction, so we have to come up with a proposal. In coming up with the proposal, again we are guided by the principle that we should provide hope as far as possible to the small and medium NGOs, so that the cut is much moderate. Instead of a 7 per cent cumulative cut, we have absorbed 4 per cent. Altogether, for the small and medium NGOs, they will face a cut of 3 per cent by the year 2027-28.

However, for large NGOs, there is not much we can help. They have to reduce their budget by 2027-28 by 7 per cent. But at the same time, we are trying our very best to, first of all, provide a much longer period for them to manage and hold their reserve, so firstly, they can make better use of that reserve to get through the more difficult years. And secondly, over cost apportionment, we are providing more flexibility. The first round of relaxation has just been announced.

And also, we are going to review each and every Funding and Service Agreement (FSA). The purpose is to provide more flexibility to reduce reporting and supervision, but of course, this is subject to the principle that it is not going to affect the benefits of their users. So I am pretty confident after the meeting on Monday that we are more or less on the same page. We are working together. We are facing a budget cut, but at the same time, because of the more flexible use of reserve and also the efforts we are making to provide more room for them to make better use of their resources, we should be able to deal with that together. Thank you.

Following is the speech by the Secretary for Innovation, Technology and Industry, Professor Sun Dong, at the Chinese New Year reception hosted by the Hong Kong Economic and Trade Office in Brussels (Brussels ETO) in Barcelona, Spain on March 4 (Barcelona time):

Ladies and gentlemen,

Good evening, buenas noches, Kung Hei Fat Choi! It is with great pleasure that I join you all here this evening at the Chinese New Year Reception in Barcelona to extend my warmest greetings from Hong Kong.

As we gather here to celebrate the Year of the Snake, it is a timely opportunity to reflect on the Snake as a symbol of transformation, agility, and wisdom – qualities that resonate deeply with our endeavors in pushing ahead the innovation and technology (I&T) development.

Building on Hong Kong's success as a world-renowned international financial, aviation and trading centre, Hong Kong is well-positioned to be developed into an international I&T centre under the big wave of technology. With the unwavering support from the motherland and our substantial investment on the I&T front in recent years, Hong Kong's I&T ecosystem is becoming increasingly vibrant. Our I&T development is now at the dawn of an unprecedented golden era.

Over the past two years, the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region Government has launched a series of proactive initiatives to boost Hong Kong's I&T development, including developing I&T infrastructure, supporting research and development, and attracting talent and investments. I am happy to say that they are bearing fruit. Start-ups in Hong Kong continued to flourish with a record high number of almost 4 700. We had also achieved impressive progress in attracting I&T enterprises and talent from the Mainland and overseas. In two years' time, we have attracted more than 130 I&T enterprises with high potential and representativeness to set up or expand their businesses in the city. All of them are the best proof of Hong Kong's attractiveness.

But we are not resting on our laurels. Leveraging the unique advantages we enjoyed under "one country, two systems", we continue to strengthen our impact as a "super connector" and a "super value-adder" in the international arena through promoting global I&T and industry collaboration.

Ladies and gentlemen, as the Chinese proverb says, "The plan for the year lies in the Spring". With me tonight are representatives from Hong Kong's major I&T quangos, including the Hong Kong Science Park, Cyberport, the Hong Kong Applied Science and Technology Research Institute, and the Hong Kong Microelectronics Research and Development Institute, as well as their tech ventures. We are here not only to showcase Hong Kong's latest I&T offerings in the Mobile World Congress 2025, but also to explore new opportunities and sow the seeds for more win-win I&T co-operation between Hong Kong and Spain, as well as the entire Iberian Peninsula. I am confident that our tech mission to Spain this time will be a fruitful one, just like the future of Hong Kong's I&T development.

In closing, thank you for my colleagues at the Brussels ETO as well as the Hong Kong Trade Development Council for co-organising this great event. May the Year of the Snake inspire us to shed our old ways of thinking and embrace the agility, wisdom and spirit of innovation that will drive us forward.

Thank you and wish you all an enjoyable evening!
