

Consultant ear nose and throat surgeon recognised as one of Top 50 Women in Engineering

Miss Catherine Rennie, consultant ear nose and throat (ENT) surgeon, has been recognised in this year's Top 50 Women in Engineering list.

Corticosteroids may be an effective treatment for Covid-19 complications in children

An international study has shown that corticosteroids may be an effective treatment for children who develop a rare but serious condition after Covid-19 infection.

Artificial intelligence breast cancer screening project wins government funding for NHS trial

UK researchers have secured government funding to study the use of artificial intelligence (AI) for breast cancer screening in NHS hospitals.

Trust pilots remote monitoring for heart failure patients

Imperial College Healthcare is working with remote healthcare provider, Luscii, to pilot an at-home monitoring system for patients with heart failure.

Dr James Price appointed as director of infection prevention and control

Dr James Price appointed as director of infection prevention and control taking over from Professor Alison Holmes after 15 years in post.