

Bathing water season in England begins as applications re-open

The Environment Agency will be testing water quality more than 7000 times during the season