Pea gin: how your choice of afternoon tipple could help save the rainforest
Botanic Garden – Sunday 3rd November

Pete Iannetta, James Hutton Institute will discuss a study that found that the environmental footprint of pea gin was significantly lower than for wheat gin across 12 of 14 environmental impacts evaluated – from climate change, through water and air pollution, to fossil energy consumption.

Held in the Education Centre in the Garden at 2pm; a free event to Friends of the University of Dundee Botanic Garden; others – donations welcome.
