

Children not always recognised as domestic abuse victims in their own right, inspectorates warn

Children who are affected by domestic abuse are not being consistently recognised as victims despite this being set out in law, according to a new joint report by Ofsted, the CQC, HMICFRS, and HMIP.