

Emergency workers to be better protected from racial abuse

Emergency workers will be better protected from violence and abuse when visiting homes as the government introduces new laws to support frontline staff.