

Exploring disability during the Covid-19 pandemic through oral history

This Disability History Month, staff from across the British Library have collaborated on a series of blog posts to highlight stories of disability and disabled people in the Library's collections. Each week a curator will showcase an item from the collections and present it alongside commentary from a member of...