meet The Doolichters

As Covid arrived and the world suddenly ground to an abrupt halt, five singing granddads from Dundee with a combined age of 343 years overcame the perils of 'going digital' and connected over the internet to produce a song. The Rag Man, an unlikely tale of recycling romance gained a local foothold with press and public and in the summer of 2020 a full album followed, all self-penned, celebrating their home in Dundee.

The five comprise Tom Bruce, Sandy Clarke, Ian Moore, Ron Lindsay and Ian Kennedy and the songs reflected growing up in the City in the 50's and 60's. They overcame lockdown restrictions by sharing music and video over the internet which led to the establishment of Doolichters TV on You Tube which now boasts getting on for 40,000 views.

The band took the name 'The Doolichters' from the name for a large 'bunnet' or cap, big enough for a pigeon to alight on and their first album 'This Is Dundee' sold out with the follow-up CD, 'Mystifehd & Ancient' released in December 2021 having every likelihood of following the same path..
