

From builder's tea to oat milk coffee, how British family eating habits have changed since WW2

New survey data shows that British families eat a significantly larger variety of foods since 1940