

Geological skills and knowledge crucial in delivering net-zero

The UK is well placed to research and develop geological solutions to climate change due to the excellent and well-developed knowledge base, mature understanding of the UK's subsurface, as well as world-class universities and research centres.