

Government empowers disadvantaged pupils to reach university

Almost 10,000 high-achieving young people will receive letters from students at Kings College London encouraging them to consider a university education.