

Government looks to slash red tape to make charging electric vehicles at home easier

Reforms will open up affordable home charging to thousands more households