

Government to align with European specifications on high risk in vitro diagnostic devices to reduce regulatory burden

The specifications will establish standards for high-risk diagnostic tests while creating consistency with European regulations