

Greens welcome climate talks in UK, but government will have to change radically to avoid embarrassment

18 June 2019

Jonathan Bartley, co-leader of the Green Party of England and Wales, has welcomed the news that the UK now looks set to host the 2020 global climate talks.

He said: "Having this crucial global gathering on our climate emergency in the UK will be a great opportunity for us to learn from the top experts and campaigners, and galvanise the struggle for climate action in our country.

"But if we are not to be embarrassed in front of the world, the policies of this or a subsequent government are going to have to change radically.

"To be the hosts of COP26 when you are still pursuing the failed policy of fracking, massively subsidising fossil fuels, planning on expanding aviation and traffic, and building sub-standard energy-inefficient homes, would be a massive embarrassment.

"The UK has a proud record as a pioneer with the 2008 Climate Change Act. But we won't be able to still trade on that legacy in 2020, as the British delegation was trying to do at the climate talks last year in Katowice."
