

Al-Sadr locked into 'zero-sum' game for Iraq dominance

Wed, 2022-08-31 23:34

BAGHDAD: Iraqi Shiite cleric Moqtada Al-Sadr may have declared his "definitive retirement" from politics this week, but the violence that erupted after his announcement points to murkier intentions, analysts believe.

"Al-Sadr is looking to become the most powerful Shiite political player in Iraq," Renad Mansour of British think tank Chatham House said.

"That is his agenda, and part of achieving that requires destabilizing not just the political system as such, but particularly the Shiite house and building it back up with him at the center of it."

SHUBRA BELOULA, Egypt: The village of Shubra Beloula on the Nile Delta is at the heart of the jasmine industry in Egypt, which along with India is one of the world's top two producers.

The fragrant flower is the village's main economic activity and source of income, employing most of the population of about 15,000 during the harvesting season between June and September.

In fields outside the village, workers walk along rows of bushes in the relative cool of the night and early morning, using headtorches to pick flowers by hand into baskets.
