

Mitigating ground risk in the construction sector

British Geological Survey is developing a national geotechnical data service to help construction projects manage ground risk earlier and more effectively.