

New £50 million cyber academy to benefit influential UK-US relationship

A new £50 million UK centre will support the training of world-class cyber experts, both domestically and internationally, Defence Secretary Ben Wallace has announced.