

New report backs government action to help neurodivergent people succeed at work

Neurodivergent people can thrive in the workplace when they are given tailored employment support an independent report has found.