

New report confirms fluoridation can reduce tooth decay among children

The benefits of the report are greater for those in more deprived areas, reducing inequalities and helping level up oral health.