

One year on: Labour 'haemorrhaging' support to the Greens over Gaza and welfare cuts

Labour is 'haemorrhaging' support to the Greens over its failure to oppose the Israeli government's genocide in Gaza and its plans to slash support for disabled people.

The Green Party is now polling consistently around 10%, a 43% increase from their 2024 vote share that saw them gain a record vote count of close to two million, while polling this week shows that 2024 Labour voters are more likely to say they would now vote for the Greens than for Reform. Among young people, 30% of under-30s now say they will vote Green compared to just 25% saying they will vote Labour.

Greens point to their consistently principled approach to issues such as Gaza, disability benefits, and the climate crisis as key reasons why they are winning support from Labour in droves.

"A year into this Labour government, all voters have seen from them is disappointment, failure and capitulation," said Adrian Ramsay MP, Co-Leader of The Green Party. "From failing to take decisive action to prevent the Israeli government's genocide in Gaza to cruel cuts to support for disabled people – all across the country, people are feeling that the Labour party they voted for has abandoned them.

"That's playing out in the support we're seeing coming from Labour to the Greens, and the u-turns we've seen from Starmer over winter fuel payments and welfare cuts show that he knows he risks losing not just votes but seats to the Greens at the next election."

Carla Denyer, MP for Bristol Central and Co-Leader of the Green Party, said:

"After a litany of broken promises, it's no surprise that Labour are haemorrhaging support to the Greens. Labour promised to make life better for people, but instead they kept the two-child benefit cap and stripped winter fuel payments from pensioners. They promised to tackle the climate crisis, but they've given the go-ahead to climate-wrecking airport expansion. They promised to end the housing crisis, but they've given developers a blank cheque to bulldoze nature to build luxury homes while failing to build the social housing we need."

Denyer continued, "Meanwhile, voters have seen the Greens consistently standing up for the values that they hold dear: protecting the planet for future generations, opposing genocide, and supporting the most vulnerable in society."

The Green MPs point to a series of successes over the past 12 months, including:

- Leading the opposition to the government's welfare cuts which led to an 11th hour climbdown
- Helped to win the reversal of winter fuel cuts and expansion of free school meals
- Raising the alarm about the Israeli government's genocide in Gaza
- Successfully pushing for solar panels to be put on all new homes
- Putting pressure on government to make it easier for councils to crack down on rogue landlords, leading to a change in the rules.
