

Population of endangered native species thriving in Yorkshire

A thriving population of native white-clawed crayfish has been rediscovered in a West Yorkshire watercourse providing a boost for the endangered species.