

News story: Looking after our environment

The team kitted out in protective clothing and armed with litter grabbers, took part in a clean-up operation with a difference recently.

Mike White, head of Infrastructure, Sellafield Ltd said:

We wanted to do a litter pick to reinforce our nuclear professionalism standards and raise awareness of how we can all help in improving our environment.

Like many community groups who are inspired to tackle the increasing problems with litter and waste, we wanted to do our bit on site. We want our employees to be proud of Sellafield and the environment they work in and a big step is to keep it as litter free as we can – with everyone doing their bit to maintain the standard.

Around 80 team members from Sellafield Ltd and Mitie took part. During the 2 hour pick, teams gathered around 100 bags of waste from a pair of flip flops to a tea towel to the most common cans etc.

Liz Spedding, head of Facility Services, Sellafield Ltd, added:

Teams in Infrastructure have specific jobs looking after and recycling waste but it's all of our responsibility to discard of waste appropriately.

We're all very aware of the impact rubbish has on our environment. The recent BBC 'Blue Planet II' documentary highlighted the devastating consequences and impact waste is having on our planet and our oceans.

"This is just one day but hopefully it will encourage everyone to take pride in your workplaces. We have litter kits available and will offer them out through normal networks if teams want to help keep their areas tidy.

News story: Government agrees final proposal for Heathrow expansion

Today (5 June 2018) ministers have set out final proposals to back Heathrow expansion – moving Britain a significant step closer to more flights, more jobs and greater economic growth.

Marking an important milestone in building a global Britain, the government has published the proposed Airports National Policy Statement (NPS), backing Heathrow expansion through developing a new north-west runway.

Airports National Policy Statement on a proposed a new runway at Heathrow

Under the proposal, expansion will be delivered in a cost-efficient and sustainable way, with a comprehensive package of measures to support affected communities and protect the environment.

Heathrow will be privately financed and costs will not fall on the taxpayer. To make sure expansion is delivered with consumers' interests at heart, the government has asked the Civil Aviation Authority to ensure the scheme remains affordable while meeting the needs of passengers.

A new runway at Heathrow would provide benefits of up to £74 billion to passengers and the wider economy and create tens of thousands of local jobs. It will better connect the UK to the rest of world with an extra 16 million long-haul seats available by 2040.

Heathrow is already the UK's biggest airport for passengers and freight and the north-west runway will almost double the airport's capacity for goods, allowing businesses across the country to increase their exports and take advantage of new global customers.

The benefits of expanding Heathrow will be felt across the country as there will be more flights around the UK, better connecting Scotland, Northern Ireland, the North and the South West to new global markets via London.

Transport Secretary Chris Grayling said:

Expansion at Heathrow presents a unique opportunity to deliver a multi-billion pound boost to our economy, strengthen our global links and maintain our position as a world leader in aviation.

As we leave the EU, the UK must remain one of the world's best-connected and outward-looking countries and a third runway at Heathrow is the best option to deliver this.

We have listened to views through our consultations and will ensure a world-class package of measures to help any local communities affected by the expansion.

MORE UK CONNECTIONS

Other UK airports would have more access to Heathrow

 Department for Transport

The NPS takes into account public and industry feedback and recommendations made by the Transport Committee to ensure that airport expansion in the south-east will be delivered in a way that is cost-efficient, sustainable and in passengers' best interests.

This includes a world-class package of compensation and mitigation measures to support those affected by the expansion, with up to £2.6 billion for compensation, noise insulation and community amenities, which could include improvements to parks and leisure facilities.

These are reinforced by plans for a 6.5 hour scheduled night flight ban and noise restrictions which will be legally enforceable.

LOWER FARES

More competition between airlines at Heathrow would help keep ticket prices low

 Department for Transport

The government has also announced the creation of a new Independent Commission on Civil Aviation Noise, which will be an independent expert voice on noise issues, acting as a link between airport operators, airlines and local communities.

To protect the environment, development consent would only be granted on the basis that the new runway is delivered within existing air quality obligations.

Over the next few weeks Parliament will have the opportunity to debate and vote on the NPS.

Statement to Parliament: Update: Media Mergers

Mr Speaker, with permission, I would like to make a statement about the proposed merger between Comcast and Sky, and the proposed merger between 21st Century Fox and Sky.

In my quasi-judicial role I have considered these mergers separately, on their own merits, and want to set out my decisions taken on the basis of the relevant evidence.

Mr Speaker, I would first like to update the House on Comcast's proposed acquisition.

On 7 May Comcast notified an intention to acquire Sky. As Secretary of State, I am required to consider whether the merger raises public interest concerns that meet the threshold for intervention, as set out in Section 58 of the Enterprise Act 2002.

As required, I considered:

- The need for a sufficient plurality of people with control of media enterprises
- The need for a wide range of high quality broadcasting
- And the need for a genuine commitment to broadcasting standards

Last month I informed the House I was minded not to intervene in the merger on the basis that it does not meet the threshold for intervention.

I gave interested parties time to make representations and I received no further representations.

As a result, I have concluded that the proposed merger does not raise public interest concerns and so I can confirm today that I will not be issuing an intervention notice.

Turning to Fox's proposed acquisition of Sky.

In March 2017 my predecessor issued an Intervention Notice on public interest grounds, due to concerns about media plurality and the genuine commitment to broadcasting standards.

The Intervention Notice triggered Phase 1 investigations by Ofcom and the CMA.

In September, having considered these reports, along with further advice from Ofcom, she referred the proposed merger to the CMA for a Phase 2 investigation on both grounds.

The CMA published its interim report in January, and provided its final report to me on 1 May.

I have today published this report, and deposited a copy in the Libraries of both Houses.

The report confirms, as previously set out, that the proposed merger does pass the threshold for a relevant merger situation, and provides recommendations on both public interest tests.

On broadcasting standards, the CMA carried out a thorough and systematic assessment, taking into account:

Fox and Sky's approach to broadcasting standards, both in the UK and outside.

And the approach of Fox and News Corp to wider regulatory compliance and corporate governance.

The CMA concluded in line with its interim findings that the merger may not be expected to operate against the public interest on the grounds of a genuine commitment to broadcasting standards.

And Mr Speaker, I agree with this finding.

On the question of media plurality, the CMA's final report confirms its interim findings that the proposed merger may be expected to operate against the public interest.

The CMA found cause for concern in two areas.

First, the potential erosion of Sky News' editorial independence which could in turn lead to a reduction in the diversity of viewpoints available to and consumed by the public.

And second, the possibility of an increased influence of the Murdoch Family Trust over public opinion and the UK's political agenda.

The CMA has used a clear and logical approach, and taken into account Ofcom's media plurality framework.

They have taken great care to obtain a wide range of written and oral evidence.

And Mr Speaker, I agree with this finding too. Where the CMA makes a finding that a merger is likely to operate against the public interest, they are then required to consider what remedy would be appropriate.

To address the media plurality concerns, the CMA considered a range of options, including those proposed by the parties.

Specifically, these were:

First, a firewall of behavioural commitments to insulate Sky News from the influence of the Murdoch Family Trust;

Second, a ring fence, where Sky News would be separated structurally from Sky, but still owned by Fox. Along with the same behavioural commitments;

Third, divesting Sky News to a suitable third party;

And fourth, prohibition of the transaction as a whole.

I have considered the CMA's detailed assessment and their conclusions on how effective and proportionate the different remedies are.

I agree with the CMA that divesting Sky News to Disney, as proposed by Fox, or to an alternative suitable buyer, with an agreement to ensure it is funded for at least ten years, is likely to be the most proportionate and effective remedy for the public interest concerns that have been identified.

The CMA report sets out some draft terms for such a divestment, and Fox has written to me to offer undertakings on effectively the same terms.

The proposals include significant commitments from Fox. But there are some important issues on the draft undertakings which still need to be addressed.

I need to be confident that the final undertakings ensure that Sky News:

- remains financially viable over the long-term
- is able to operate as a major UK-based news provider
- and is able to take its editorial decisions independently, free from any potential outside influence

As a result, I have asked my officials to begin immediate discussions with the parties to finalise the details with a view to agreeing an acceptable form of the remedy, so we can all be confident Sky News can be divested in a way that works for the long term.

Under the legislation, I am required to consult formally for 15 days on the undertakings.

Subject to the willingness of the parties to agree the details, I aim to publish this consultation within a fortnight.

I am optimistic that we can achieve this goal, not least given the willingness 21st Century Fox has shown in developing these credible proposals.

However, if we can't agree terms at this point, then I agree with the CMA that the only effective remedy now would be to block the merger altogether. This is not my preferred approach.

Mr Speaker, we have followed a scrupulously fair and impartial process, based only on the relevant evidence and objectively justified by the facts.

I would like to thank Ofcom, the CMA, the parties, my predecessor and my fantastic team at DCMS for all of their hard work. I hope we can reach a final agreement very soon.

Mr Speaker, I want to see a broadcasting industry in Britain that is strong and effective and competitive. And I commend this statement to the House.

News story: Ian Wilson joins BPDTS Ltd's Board Of Directors

Ian Wilson has been appointed as a BPDTS Ltd non-executive director for a 5-year term.

He is also currently chair of EDS UK Pension Funds, and a non-executive director with the Ministry of Defence's Defence Business Services Risk and Assurance Committee.

Ian is a Chartered Accountant and was previously the Director of Business Services at Network Rail where he was responsible for the delivery of shared services across the organisation. Prior to joining Network Rail in 2013, Ian worked in the global IT industry for over 20 years in a number of senior finance and business services roles.

Welcoming the appointment, chair of the BPDTS Ltd Board, Claire Johnston, said:

Ian brings a wealth of senior financial and digital experience. I know he is really looking forward to sharing his professional knowledge as a member of our Board and Audit and Risk Committee.

Ian's appointment reflects that we've moved onto the next chapter of our evolution. I'm sure as an independent director that he'll help hugely in guiding and supporting our organisation as we continue to grow.

Ian Wilson, talking about his new role, said:

I'm excited to be joining the Board at a point of huge growth and opportunity for the company. It is already well-positioned as a partner to DWP Digital; working to transform, develop and deliver new digital services that are used by millions of UK citizens.

News story: Ideas mean business: winning young innovators announced

Innovate UK has announced the 24 winners of its Ideas mean business awards, which were open to applicants aged 18 to 30-years-old who were not in full-time education or employment.

The Ideas mean business campaign is a partnership between Innovate UK and The Prince's Trust, designed to support young people to make their ideas a reality, regardless of their background.

Introducing the young innovators

Winners' ideas range from sustainable product design to online businesses and apps.

27-year-old Adam Root from Felstead in Essex will receive support to develop his sustainability-focussed product design company, Inheriting Earth.

Inspired by his love of the ocean, Adam is developing a filter system to help reduce the flow of microfibres – tiny plastic particles that enter the water system when we wash our clothes.

27-year-old Adam Root will receive support for his sustainable product design.

Laura Niehorster from Sketty in Wales will receive support for her company Proud Pads.

The 27-year-old has developed a sanitary product that can be washed and reused for up to 5 years. The pads could help to reduce sanitary waste: in the UK we throw away up to 200,000 tonnes every year according to the Women's Environmental Network.

Laura Niehorster, from Wales, has designed a sustainable, reusable sanitary pad.

Encouraging diversity in innovation

The campaign was launched following research commissioned by Innovate UK and The Prince's Trust.

Carried out by YouGov, the report explored how disadvantaged young people felt about innovation and entrepreneurship. It revealed that, while this group is interested in entrepreneurship, there are significant barriers preventing them from starting their own businesses.

Ideas mean business was devised to encourage and empower young people from any background to innovate and be successful.

Each of the winners will receive a package of support to help them develop their innovative business or idea. The package includes:

- one-on-one coaching from an innovation champion
- funding to support the development of their business
- an allowance to cover living costs

Supporting the next generation of disrupters and entrepreneurs

Sam Gyimah, Minister of State for Universities, Science, Research and Innovation said:

We are a nation of innovators and inventors and these Innovate UK awards showcase some of the greatest young talent we have in this country.

We have committed a big increase in the amount we as a country invest in R&D – from 1.7% today to 2.4% by 2027. This could see an additional £80 billion spent on developing the ideas of tomorrow and supporting the next generation of disrupters and entrepreneurs.

Ian Campbell, Executive Chair, of Innovate UK, which is part of UK Research and Innovation, commented:

Innovation is the lifeblood of the UK, driving economic growth and creating a positive social impact.

The government's modern Industrial Strategy aims to break down the barriers that prevent talent from growing and potential being realised, engaging young people in business innovation is a crucial part of that.

I'm incredibly proud to announce the inspiring winners of our Ideas mean business awards today. In telling their stories, we now hope to demonstrate to other young people from all backgrounds right across the UK that they too could transform an idea into a viable business.
