

Some big businesses contradict themselves on Brexit

The large companies that still want us to remain in the EU are pushing back hard on the government.

They contradict themselves. They say an early exit with no deal will be bad for their UK activities, yet their main demand is continuing access to lots of cheap continental labour after we leave! They must be planning to expand their UK businesses whilst suggesting the opposite.

As many of them recommended the disastrous recession creating Exchange Rate Mechanism to the UK, and thought the Euro would be good for the economies of Europe the UK government should be sceptical of their judgement.
