Ending the HIV epidemic: where does Europe stand?

The global targets set out by UNAIDS for 2020 are to diagnose 90% of all HIV-positive people, provide antiretroviral therapy for 90% of those diagnosed, and achieve viral suppression for 90% of those treated (known as 90-90-90 targets). In 2018, 52 of 55 countries completed the survey indicating the progress towards these targets in Europe and Central Asia.

Between “substantial progress” and “concerning”

Is Europe on track to end AIDS by 2020? Following analysis of the data provided by the 52 countries in 2018, the progress towards the 90-90-90 targets stands at 86%-91%-92% in the EU/EEA. This means that overall, countries in the EU/EEA are on track to reach the targets by 2020. Looking at the whole Region, however, a striking drop in the second stage of the continuum is apparent: across Europe and Central Asia, the figures show a significant gap in the amount of people who are diagnosed with HIV but not receiving treatment: 80%-64%-86%. The article provides results on the targets for each of the reporting countries.

The authors acknowledge “substantial progress” towards the 90-90-90 targets across Europe and Central Asia. However, among the estimated 2.1 million people living with HIV in Europe and Central Asia “only two out of five are estimated to be virally suppressed in 2018”. Furthermore, “the substantial drop-off between the percentages diagnosed and treated in the East sub-region is concerning since it enables preventable deaths, serious illness and onward transmission.”

The results give new insights into necessary steps in the regional or national HIV responses. As almost two-thirds of the 1.2 million people across the region with transmissible virus are diagnosed but only half of those are on treatment, “the biggest public health impact could be achieved through rapid and sustained scale up of treatment”, according to the authors. This is particularly true for countries in the east of the region where the outcome was 76%–46%–78%.

Policies that diversify and enhance the offer of HIV tests could help address the problem of late diagnosis across Europe, as outlined in the new ECDC guidance on HIV, hepatitis B and C testing. This would include testing for indicator conditions, during screenings for other sexually transmitted infections, in community-based settings, as self/home-testing and for partner notification.

The authors highlight that the 90–90–90 targets remain a “powerful tool to assess progress towards HIV elimination and drive standards in care” for people living with HIV. But these targets do not provide a comprehensive picture of the public health response to HIV. “Each ‘last 10 percent’ includes people especially marginalised from healthcare services.”

What are the 90-90-90 targets?

The so-called continuum of HIV care is a framework which allows countries to monitor the effectiveness of key areas in the response to the HIV epidemic along several stages, from diagnosis towards viral suppression. The overall aim is that people living with HIV are diagnosed (early) and receive antiretroviral treatment (ART) which leads to viral suppression, i.e. the virus is no longer detectable in the blood. Such an undetectable viral load also means that HIV positive people on effective treatment do not transmit the virus.

Based on the findings of the ECDC Dublin Declaration report on the continuum in 2015, ECDC now monitors a four-stage continuum that is directly relevant in the European region. Stage 1 looks at the estimated number of all people living with HIV (PLHIV); stage 2 at the number of all PLHIV who have been diagnosed; stage 3 at the number of PLHIV who have been diagnosed and who are on ART; and stage 4 comprises the number of PLHIV on ART who are virally suppressed. In 2018, 34 of 55 countries provided data on all four continuum stages.

European Cinema Night: 34 EU cities offer free screenings of European films

Launched as part of the Creative Europe MEDIA programme, which has supported the European audiovisual sector for the past 27 years, the 'European Cinema Night' initiative aims to show how the EU not only contributes to the development of Europe's creative and cultural industries, but also benefits our society as a whole. With some 50 free screenings programmed across the EU from 3 to 7 December, the objective of this European Commission initiative is to bring Europe closer to people while celebrating together the richness of European films.

Commissioner Mariya Gabriel, in charge of Digital Economy and Society, said: "Cinema is an essential part of our rich and diverse European culture and is contributing to reinforce bonds between people feeling the same passion and emotion on a movie. The European cinema nights are an occasion to show this diversity and to illustrate the importance of supporting a rich, free and diverse film production. With all the actions taken in favour of European cinema, the EU is present in the everyday life of citizens".

Commissioner Tibor Navracsics, in charge of Education, Culture, Youth and Sport, added: "European films are part of our cultural heritage which we have been celebrating all year with the objective of making it accessible to everyone. In this spirit, the European cinema nights will show citizens how European policy is linked to their lives, to the emotions they feel at cinemas, and how by attending a local event they can be part of an experience shared across Europe."

Each of the 34 cinemas taking part in the initiative will organise a special evening event where they will screen one of the 20 MEDIA-supported films. This list includes "Cold War", "The Killing of a Sacred Deer", "Girl", and "Border". The films have been chosen by local cinemas to allow them to adapt the programme to the interests and specifications of their diverse audiences. The local venues are all renowned cinemas, belonging to the Europa Cinemas network, co-ordinated by Creative Europe MEDIA and the TV broadcaster ARTE.

The screenings will be followed by a short debate where film lovers will have the opportunity to discuss the films with filmmakers and film critics. Representatives of the European Commission will also be present, to explain more about the MEDIA programme and its importance for shaping the European audiovisual landscape.

Background

Since 1991, the European Commission has shaped Europe's audiovisual sector, contributing to its competitiveness and to cultural diversity in Europe, through the MEDIA Programme. One of its most substantial actions is providing financial support to the distribution of European films outside their country of production. Every year, on average over 400 films are made available to audiences in another European country with MEDIA's help. In May 2018, the Commission proposed to increase the budget of the programme by almost 30% for the next EU long-term budget for 2021-2027.

The 'European Cinema Night' is a new initiative arising in the context of an outreach strategy focusing on audiences and aiming to enhance knowledge of the MEDIA Programme and the topics it covers, while fostering citizen outreach and participation. In addition, it helps to promote European audiovisual works across borders as well as cultural diversity. The initiative also complements the EUandME campaign, which uses a series of five short films focused on mobility, sustainability, skills and business, digital and rights to show how Europe makes a difference.

EU approves disbursement of €500 million in Macro-Financial Assistance to Ukraine

The European Commission, on behalf of the EU, has today approved the disbursement of the first €500 million of the new Macro-Financial Assistance \(MFA\) programme to Ukraine. With this disbursement, the total Macro-Financial Assistance extended to Ukraine by the EU since 2014 will reach €3.3 billion, the largest amount of such assistance directed at any non-EU country. Under the new MFA programme approved by the European Parliament and the Council in July 2018, up to €1 billion is available to Ukraine. The programme helps Ukraine cover its financing needs and supports the implementation of a wide-ranging structural reform agenda. Valdis Dombrovskis, Commission Vice-President responsible for the Euro and Social Dialogue, also in charge of Financial Stability, Financial Services and Capital Markets Union, said: "The European Union has shown constant political and financial support to Ukraine.

Today's European Commission decision on disbursement comes at a crucial moment when Ukraine and its people face a new aggression from Russia and need to see solidarity from international partners. Such aggressive behaviour is not acceptable in today's Europe." Pierre Moscovici, Commissioner in charge of Economic and Financial Affairs, Taxation and Customs, added: "Ukraine has fulfilled the policy commitments agreed with the EU for the release of the first payment under the Macro-Financial Assistance programme. This is an important and encouraging signal that Ukraine continues to deliver on reforms despite the current security environment and the upcoming electoral cycle." A press release is available here. (For more information: Annika Breidthardt Tel.: +32 229 56153; Anniky Lamp Tel.: +32 229 56151; Enda McNamara Tel.: +32 229 64976)

The EU Budget for 2019: Commission makes a new proposal to achieve growth, solidarity and security in Europe and beyond

In the context of the negotiations between the European Parliament and the Council on the draft budget for 2019, the European Commission has today put forward a second proposal. It foresees a budget of €165 billion in commitments, and €148 billion in payments, which reflects the discussions that took place between Council and Parliament during the November 2018 conciliation period. With this new proposal, the Commission seeks to bridge the respective positions of the European Parliament and the Council so that the EU will be able to continue investing in growth and jobs, research and innovation, students and young people – the priorities of the Juncker Commission – also in 2019. Commenting on the proposal, Günther H. Oettinger, in charge of Budget and Human Resources, said: "It is in the interest of all Europeans that the EU institutions quickly reach a deal on a budget for 2019. I therefore urge the European Parliament and the Council to make compromises so that the EU continues to provide the much needed funding to researchers, students, businesses, farmers and the socially deprived." The proposal is based on the understanding that the United Kingdom will continue to contribute to and participate in the implementation of EU budgets until the end of 2020 as if it were a Member State. Les programmes spatiaux de l'UE peuvent sauver des vies: démonstration d'une opération de recherche et de sauvetage

Le 4 décembre prochain, l'agence de systèmes de navigation par satellite globaux (GSA), le Centre national d'études spatiales (CNES) et la Marine nationale française effectueront la démonstration d'une opération de recherche et de sauvetage de pêcheurs dont le bateau serait perdu au large des côtes françaises. Le service de recherche et de sauvetage (SAR) de Galileo et le service d'urgence de Copernicus sont utilisés pour mener l'opération. Les journalistes intéressés peuvent encore s'inscrire par email pour réserver une des quelques places encore disponibles sur le bateau. Cet exercice vise à démontrer comment les opérations de recherche et sauvetage (SAR) localisent et permettent d'aider les personnes en détresse équipées d'une balise de secours. De telles balises fonctionnent grâce aux services spatiaux de l'UE: les signaux de navigation par satellite de Galileo et les services de la surveillance et de la cartographie maritimes de Copernicus. La commissaire pour le marché intérieur, l'industrie, l'entrepreneuriat et les PMEs, Elżbieta Bieńkowska, participera à cette démonstration de sauvetage, organisée à l'occasion de la Semaine Européenne de l'Espace à Marseille. La commissaire Bieńkowska prononcera également un discours lors de la session plénière du programme spatial de l'UE et s'entretiendra avec des start-ups qui emploient les technologies spatiales européennes. Enfin, dans la soirée, la cérémonie de remise des prix "Galileo et Copernicus Masters" aura lieu. Des projets en compétition seront récompensés pour l'utilisation des services Galileo et Copernicus dans le développement des solutions commerciales innovantes. Des prix individuels de plus de 10 000 d'euros, pour un total de plus de 600 000 d'euros, sont en jeu et démontrent que soutenir l'entrepreneuriat spatial et l'utilisation des services spatiaux est et restera une priorité pour la Commission. Plus de 1 000 personnes participeront à la semaine européenne de l'espace, au titre du développement durable et environnement, de la mobilité ou de la défense.

Commission welcomes progress made in adopting new rules for safer and modern cars

The Commission welcomes the general approach reached by the Council on the most ambitious legislation yet for the safety of vehicles on our roads. In May this year, as part of the 3rd Mobility Package, the Commission proposed that cars, trucks and buses be equipped with new and advanced safety features, such as emergency braking, intelligent speed assistance and enhanced pedestrian and cyclist protection (see full list here). Elżbieta Bieńkowska, Commissioner for the Internal Market, Industry, Entrepreneurship and SMEs, said: "I welcome the determination of the Council to agree on these new rules already now. The General Safety Regulation is crucial to improve road safety. Every year, roughly 25,000 people die on roads in the EU, which is unacceptable. These new advanced safety features are also the enablers of automated mobility, promising EU industry leadership in this important new area. We now call on the European Parliament to give priority to work on this file in order to reach a rapid agreement. There is no time to lose." While road fatalities have more than halved since 2001, 25,300 people still lost their lives on EU roads in 2017 and another 135,000 were seriously injured. The Commission is therefore taking measures with strong EU added-value to contribute to safe roads and to a Europe that protects. Once the new Regulation is adopted, the new safety measures will become mandatory within 3 years. As part of the 3rd Mobility Package, the Commission will also help Member States to systematically identify dangerous road sections and to better target investment. Overall this could save thousands of lives thereby contributing to the EU's long-term goal of moving close to zero fatalities and serious injuries by 2050 ("Vision Zero"). European Cinema Night: 34 EU cities offer free screenings of European films

Mergers: Commission opens in-depth investigation into proposed acquisition of VDM by Aperam in nickel alloy industry

The European Commission has opened an in-depth investigation to assess the proposed acquisition of VDM by Aperam under the EU Merger Regulation. Aperam and VDM are the two leading nickel alloy producers in Europe, and the transaction may strengthen VDM's already strong position in flat nickel alloy products specifically. At this stage, the Commission is concerned that, following the transaction, customers would face reduced choice of suppliers, as well as higher prices, for nickel alloy plates and sheets, and for strips. The Commission will also investigate further whether the transaction could have an effect on the supply and prices of long nickel alloy products, namely nickel alloy wire and wire rod. The Commission will now carry out an in-depth investigation into the effects of this transaction to determine whether its preliminary competition concerns are confirmed. Commissioner Margrethe Vestager, in charge of competition policy, said: "Nickel alloys are a crucial input for industrial products in a wide range of sectors, including cars and trucks, oil and gas and electronic and electrical equipment. The proposed transaction would bring together the two leading European suppliers. This is why the Commission will carefully assess whether Aperam's plans to buy VDM would affect competition in the markets for nickel alloys and would lead to less choice or higher prices for European manufacturers, and ultimately, for consumers." The full press release is available online in EN, FR, DE. Mergers: Commission approves acquisition of Fibria by Suzano, subject to conditions

The European Commission has approved under the EU Merger Regulation the acquisition of Fibria by Suzano, both active in the production and supply of wood pulp from eucalyptus trees. Suzano and Fibria, both from Brazil, are the two largest global suppliers of bleached eucalyptus kraft pulp ("BEKP"), an input to the paper, tissue and packaging industry. The Commission investigated concerns that the proposed acquisition would significantly reduce the level of competition in the market for the manufacture and supply of wood pulp, in particular BEKP. The merged entity would combine the two largest producers worldwide, three to four times larger than the next competitor. Furthermore, Fibria had an offtake agreement since 2016 with Klabin S.A, another major Brazilian producer of BEKP. On the basis of this agreement, Fibria acted as an exclusive sales agent for all sales of BEKP produced by Klabin outside of South America. To address the Commission's competition concerns, Suzano offered the following commitments: (a) the termination of the offtake agreement in place between Fibria and Klabin; and (b) the transfer of all assets and personnel necessary to allow Klabin to independently sell BEKP in the European Economic Area (EEA). These commitments eliminate the Commission's concerns in relation to the proposed acquisition. The Commission therefore concluded that the proposed transaction, as modified by the commitments, would no longer raise competition concerns in the EEA. The decision is conditional upon full compliance with the commitments. The full press release is available online in EN, FR, DE, PT. Mergers: Commission clears creation of joint venture by Mondi Štětí, Holzindustrie Maresch and ECO-INVESTMENT

The European Commission has approved, under the EU Merger Regulation, the creation of a joint venture by Mondi Štětí of Czechia, Holzindustrie Maresch of Austria, and ECO-INVESTMENT also of Czechia. The joint venture will be active in the construction and operation of a sawmill in Czechia. Mondi Štětí supplies corrugated base paper and market pulp and manufactures high quality kraft paper. Holzindustrie Maresch manufactures wood products and specialises in the manufacture of sawn wood. ECO-INVESTMENT holds investments in the paper, packaging, meat processing, energy and real estate industries. The Commission concluded that the proposed transaction would raise no competition concerns given the limited overlaps between the companies' activities. The transaction was examined under the simplified merger review procedure. More information is available on the Commission's competition website, in the public case register under the case number M.9087. (For more information: Ricardo Cardoso – Tel.: +32 229 80100; Maria Tsoni – Tel.: +32 229 90526)

Mergers: Commission sends Supplementary Statement of Objections to Canon for possible early implementation of acquisition

The European Commission has sent a Supplementary Statement of Objections to Canon Inc. This is a procedural step in the Commission's ongoing investigation looking into whether Canon implemented its acquisition of Toshiba Medical Systems Corporation before notification to and approval by the Commission, in breach of the EU Merger Regulation. The Commission sent a Statement of Objections to Canon in July 2017 detailing its preliminary view that Canon used a so-called "warehousing" two-step transaction structure involving an interim buyer, which essentially allowed it to implement its acquisition of Toshiba Medical Systems prior to obtaining the relevant merger approvals from the Commission. The Supplementary Statement of Objections complements this preliminary view. The sending of a Supplementary Statement of Objections does not prejudge the outcome of the investigation. More information is available on the Commission's competition website, in the public case register under the case number M.8179. Déclaration du vice-président Ansip et des commissaires Bieńkowska, Jourová et Gabriel sur les nouvelles règles de l'UE permettant aux citoyens de faire des achats en ligne sans frontières

Le 3 décembre 2018, le nouveau règlement, proposé par la Commission européenne en mai 2016, pour mettre fin au géoblocage en ligne injustifié, entrera en vigueur. Les Européens n'auront pas à s'inquiéter de ce qu'un site web les bloque ou les réachemine simplement parce qu'eux-mêmes, ou leur carte de crédit, proviennent d'un autre pays. Où qu'ils se trouvent dans l'UE, ils pourront accéder aux biens et services qui les intéressent en ligne. À cette occasion, le vice-président du marché unique numérique Andrus Ansip, la commissaire chargée du marché intérieur, de l'industrie, de l'entrepreneuriat et des PME Elbieta Bieńkowska, la commissaire chargée de la justice, des consommateurs et de l'égalité des genres Věra Jourová, et la commissaire chargée de la société et de l'économie numériques Mariya Gabriel ont déclaré: "Parallèlement à la fin des frais d'itinérance, aux nouvelles règles européennes en matière de protection des données personnelles et à la possibilité pour les citoyens de voyager avec leurs abonnements en ligne, la fin du géoblocage injustifié est une autre initiative essentielle qui fait du marché unique numérique une réalité pour tous. Les nouvelles règles permettront aux consommateurs de disposer d'un plus grand choix de produits à des prix compétitifs et, par conséquent, de meilleures offres. En même temps, les entreprises verront leur clientèle s'étendre au-delà des frontières et bénéficieront de coûts administratifs et de transaction moindres. Le règlement fait également partie d'un effort plus vaste de l'UE visant à stimuler le commerce électronique dans le marché unique, incluant des mesures visant à mieux protéger les consommateurs en ligne, à assurer une livraison transfrontalière de colis plus abordable et à simplifier les règles de TVA pour faciliter l'achat et la vente de biens en ligne." La déclaration commune complète est disponible ici. International Day of Persons with Disabilities 2018: Statement by Commissioner Thyssen

Ahead of the International Day of Persons with Disabilities, taking place every year on 3 December, Commissioner for Employment, Social Affairs, Skills and Labour Mobility, Marianne Thyssen, said: “Last year, I said I wanted 2018 to be the year of delivery for the European Accessibility Act. I am very pleased that my wish came true, as a few weeks ago, the European Parliament and the Council came to a provisional agreement which should be finalised in the coming weeks. The agreement will improve the lives of more than 80 million Europeans with disabilities. Soon, they will have at their disposal more accessible products and services, such as phones, computers, e-books and e-commerce. This will establish the European Union as the world’s largest market for accessible products and services and is a concrete realisation of the European Disability Strategy 2010-2020, which aims to create a barrier-free Europe for all European citizens. Throughout 2018, we have achieved progress on the implementation of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. In addition to the agreement on the European Accessibility Act, all EU Member States are now parties to the Convention. I am determined to continue working on our path towards a more inclusive society. One step at a time, we are making the European Pillar of Social Rights a reality, building a fairer and more social Europe for everyone.” The full statement can be found online. Statement by Commissioner Andriukaitis on World AIDS Day

Tomorrow, 1 December, is the World AIDS day. It is an opportunity for people around the world to join forces in the fight against HIV, to show support for those living with the virus, and to commemorate those who have died from an AIDS-related illness. Vytenis Andriukaitis, European Commissioner for Health and Food Safety, said: “On this day, I think about all the people who live with HIV/AIDS and suffer from related complications. Despite our efforts, I am disheartened to see that HIV still damages the lives of many people around us. It is also still a source of discrimination and stigmatisation. I, with my fellow Commissioners, took a commitment to tackling HIV/AIDS from different policy angles – including funding, research, prevention, education and linkage to treatment. More than 46 million euros have been invested under the EU Health Programme since 2003. But we have to do more. The EU Member States have committed to ending the AIDS epidemic by 2030 and the Commission is ready to support this goal. As Commissioner for Health, I am determined to work with a broad range of actors, and I am fully committed to supporting the actions of Member States and neighbouring countries to eliminate these epidemics.” More information here. International Day of Persons with Disabilities 2018: Statement by Commissioner Thyssen

Ahead of the International Day of Persons with Disabilities, taking place every year on 3 December, Commissioner for Employment, Social Affairs, Skills and Labour Mobility, Marianne Thyssen, said:

“Last year, I said I wanted 2018 to be the year of delivery for the European Accessibility Act. I am very pleased that my wish came true, as a few weeks ago, the European Parliament and the Council came to a provisional agreement which should be finalised in the coming weeks.

The agreement will improve the lives of more than 80 million Europeans with disabilities. Soon, they will have at their disposal more accessible products and services, such as phones, computers, e-books and e-commerce. This will establish the European Union as the world’s largest market for accessible products and services and is a concrete realisation of the European Disability Strategy 2010-2020, which aims to create a barrier-free Europe for all European citizens.

Throughout 2018, we have achieved progress on the implementation of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. In addition to the agreement on the European Accessibility Act, all EU Member States are now parties to the Convention.

I am determined to continue working on our path towards a more inclusive society. One step at a time, we are making the European Pillar of Social Rights a reality, building a fairer and more social Europe for everyone.”

Background

More than 80 million people in the EU are affected by a disability to some degree. Accessibility of products and services is a precondition to their equal participation and active role in society. It also contributes to ensure smart, sustainable and inclusive growth.

In 2011, the EU ratified the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities \(UNCRPD\). The Convention addresses disability as a human rights issue – not from a medical or charity perspective. It covers civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights, and a wide range of policy fields: from justice to transport, employment to information technology, and so on. All EU Member States have signed and ratified the Convention.

At EU-level, action has been taken with the proposal of the European Accessibility Act. Inclusion of people with disabilities in our society and economy is also a key principle of the European Pillar of Social Rights.

The annual Conference on the European Day of Persons with Disabilities will take place on 3 and 4 December in Brussels and coincides also with the annual Access City Award recognising cities that have worked to become more accessible for their citizen.
