

EESC reiterates its call for a stronger architecture of the European Monetary Union

Cooperation and partnership between governments and civil society will be crucial for completing ambitious reforms needed for the deepening of the Economic and Monetary Union. Taking into account economic, social and environmental aspects is equally important for strengthening the social role of the European semester, concluded a high-level panel of top EU officials and experts at the plenary session of the European Economic and Social Committee (EESC).

On 26 September, the EESC held a debate on the completion of the Economic and Monetary Union and the European Semester. The debate saw the participation of Vice-President of the European Commission Valdis Dombrovskis, former Greek Minister of the Economy Louka Katseli, Christian Ebeke of the International Monetary Fund and Tuomas Saarenheimo of the Finnish Ministry of Finance.

EESC President Luca Jahier, chairing the debate, stressed the important role and work of the EESC and its two relevant bodies, the European Semester Group and the Study Group on Economic and Fiscal Governance of the Euro Area.

The speakers agreed the debate was taking place at a decisive moment for the European economy, faced with a slowdown in growth, persistently low inflation and investment as well as rising domestic and international uncertainties.

Mr Dombrovskis announced that deepening the European and Monetary Union would be high on the next Commission's agenda. In his keynote speech at the plenary, the Vice-President Designate emphasised the important role of civil society in this regard:

In order to make real progress on difficult reforms, governments, social partners and civil society have to work hand in hand. This dialogue is especially important now, in light of the urgent challenges we face for the climate, digitalisation, globalisation – but also demographic challenges in our societies. We have to work together to turn these challenges into opportunities. For me, this is exactly the spirit of the European Economic and Social Committee.

Praising the work of the EESC, Mr Dombrovskis said, You have demonstrated how effective this approach is: it was this Committee that drafted the text of the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers, and more recently led the consultation process on shaping the final text of the European Pillar of Social Rights. And you continue to inform the debate on the future of Economic and Monetary Union.

Mr Saarenheimo, representing the Finnish Presidency of the Council, said that competitiveness, climate and security were the key priorities for European economy under his country's Presidency. He also highlighted the importance of taxation and Banking Union and of mainstreaming climate aspects into economic and financial policy.

Mr Ebeke offered a more positive view of the European economy and the eurozone, describing the situation as not bad as we are coming from a period of a high growth rate Mr Ebeke put forward the IMF recommendations to strengthen the eurozone by insisting on structural reforms and the Banking Union.

It is time for the EU to defy gravity and fly high; we just need the political will to implement this. The challenges on the horizon do not leave any other alternative than to grow in a more inclusive way, Mr Ebeke concluded.

Mr Katseli presented the conclusions from the report Sustainable Equality, which lists the reform of governance and of the European Semester among its main proposals.

We need to implement the 2030 strategy in European policies. Another Europe is necessary, another Europe is feasible, stressed Mr Katseli.

Gonçalo Lobo Xavier, President of the European Semester Group, presented the Group's initiatives and actions carried out as part of its visits to Member States. In his view, involving external actors in the European Semester gave added value to the process as European civil society had an important role to play.

Stefano Palmieri, President of the EESC Section for Economic and Monetary Union and Economic and Social Cohesion, called upon the European institutions and national governments to take more ambitious action towards deepening EMU in order to achieve a more integrated, more democratic and socially more developed/advanced Union.

The success of European economic governance will depend on the involvement of European society in the process, Mr Palmieri warned.

Concluding the debate, the EESC President said, We support a strengthened EMU, because we know that in the globalised, highly competitive and rapidly changing economy of today, no individual EU state can thrive on its own.

Background info:

The EESC has been urging EU leaders to strengthen the architecture of the EMU for a long time, including in its recent opinions on Euro area economic policy \(2019\) and Economic and Monetary Union Package.

The opinion on “Towards a stronger international role of the euro” comes as a response to a specific Commission initiative in this field launched in December 2018. In July 2019, the EESC views expressed in this opinion will be complemented by two own-initiative opinions – one on Towards a more resilient and sustainable European economy and another one on A new vision for completing the Economic and Monetary Union. All three opinions have been drawn up in a bid to outline a comprehensive vision for the European economic agenda over the next EU legislative term and to feed into the forthcoming EU leaders’ discussions on this.

EU @ UNGA74 on Friday

A week full of events and high-level meetings at the 74th session of the UN General Assembly is coming to an end. Over the past few days, the European Union has showcased its ambitious approach to climate change and sustainable development, its ongoing work to uphold human rights and its support to peace and security across the world. The EU has confirmed that it remains the most reliable partner for those who want to work collectively on joint responses to global challenges. As the High Representative/Vice-President Federica Mogherini said during her speech at the launch of the Alliance for Multilateralism: “Multilateral solutions are much more effective, because only by joining forces we can tackle the complex crises of our times.” Today, Commissioner Julian King will represent the EU at a high-level meeting reviewing the progress made in addressing the priorities of Small Island developing States (SIDS), also known as the SAMOA pathway. On Saturday, Commissioner Neven Mimica will take part in the post-Cotonou chief negotiators’ meeting on a new partnership agreement with 79 countries in Africa, the Caribbean and the Pacific. The future agreement will succeed the Cotonou Agreement. Audio-visual coverage of the events and bilateral meetings

Le premier Forum de la Connectivité discute des liens entre l'UE-Asie et renforce les relations UE-Japon

Le premier Forum européen de la connectivité a débuté ce matin à Bruxelles avec des discours du président de la Commission européenne, Jean-Claude Juncker, et de son invité spécial, le Premier ministre japonais, Shinzō Abe. Cette première édition du Forum a pour thématique la « Connectivité entre l'Union européenne et l'Asie – Construire des liens pour un avenir durable » et rassemble des participants de plus de 52 pays. Le président Juncker a déclaré : « La connectivité est inscrite dans notre ADN européen. La connectivité au sein de l'Union européenne et entre l'Union européenne et le reste du monde est d'autant plus nécessaire que nous vivons dans un monde où l'interdépendance économique entre les différentes régions du monde est de plus en plus étroite et que nous faisons tous face aux mêmes défis, qu'il s'agisse du climat, du numérique ou des changements technologiques. L'Europe renforce sa coopération avec d'autres régions du monde et en particulier avec des partenaires partageant les mêmes engagements en matière de démocratie, de respect de l'Etat de droit, de liberté et de dignité humaine. Et il ne pourrait y avoir de meilleure illustration de cette approche que la relation entre le Japon et l'Europe ». Le président Juncker et le Premier ministre Abe ont ensuite signé un partenariat pour une connectivité durable et des infrastructures de qualité entre l'Union européenne et le Japon, qui souligne encore davantage l'importance stratégique du partenariat entre l'Union européenne et le Japon que les deux parties se sont engagées à renforcer ces dernières années. Cette étape importante dans l'Union européenne et le Japon est également marquée par la recommandation de la Commission d'ouvrir les négociations pour un accord bilatéral avec le Japon sur le transfert des données des dossier de passagers. « Cet accord viendra renforcer notre nouveau partenariat sur la connectivité durable, notamment en améliorant la sûreté du transport aérien, et j'espère qu'il pourra entrer en vigueur avant les Jeux olympiques de Tokyo, » a déclaré le président Juncker. Le Forum se déroule toute la journée avec différents panels composés de membres de gouvernements, d'institutions financières européennes et internationales, et d'acteurs du secteur privé en provenance d'Europe et ailleurs. Les Premiers ministres de la Finlande et de la Croatie, Antti Rinne et Andrej Plenković, participeront à la session de clôture, modérée par le président émérite du Conseil européen, Herman Van Rompuy. Security Union: The Commission recommends opening negotiations with Japan on the transfer of Passenger Name Record (PNR) data

As announced today by President Jean-Claude Juncker at the Europa Connectivity Forum: EU-Asia Connectivity, the European Commission has recommended that the Council authorise the start of negotiations for an EU-Japan Agreement to allow the transfer and use of Passenger Name Record (PNR) data in order to prevent and combat terrorism and serious transnational crime. The Agreement will set out the framework and conditions for the exchange of PNR data, in full respect of data protection safeguards and fundamental rights, in accordance with the Charter of Fundamental Rights. Commissioner for Migration, Home Affairs and Citizenship Dimitris Avramopoulos said: “Japan is a strategic partner in the fight against terrorism and organised crime. Today we are taking this cooperation one step further – it is only by working together that we can enhance global security.” Commissioner for the Security Union Julian King said: “Passenger Name Record (PNR) data helps us to identify suspicious travel patterns and track down dangerous criminals and terrorists. It is important that we share this data with close partners like Japan, strengthening our security cooperation, and that we do so in full respect of data protection standards.” The EU and Japan are long standing strategic partners, including in the fight against terrorism and serious crime, as reaffirmed in the EU-Japan Strategic Partnership Agreement signed in July 2018. The opening of negotiations for an EU-Japan PNR Agreement further highlights the key strategic partnership between the EU and Japan. The full press release is available online. Steel imports: Commission adopts adjustments to the existing safeguards

The European Commission today published adjustments to the existing steel safeguard measures. The adjustments – effective as of 1 October – will make the existing steel safeguard measures more effective and will ensure that they better reflect the current situation in the steel sector. They include improvements in the functioning of the quota, among others for hot-rolled flat steel and steel intended for the automotive sector, an updated list of exclusions for developing countries based on more recent imports statistics, and a slower progressive increase of the import quotas (reduction of liberalisation pace from 5% to 3%). The changes will take effect as of 1 October 2019. The Commission’s proposal to proceed with the adjustments to the existing steel safeguard measures received earlier this month a wide support from EU Member States and was also subject earlier in the process to consultations with WTO Members concerned. The safeguard measures were provisionally put in place in July 2018 and have been introduced in their definitive form in February 2019. The aim has been to prevent serious injury for the EU steel industry following the increased imports and trade diversions caused by the U.S. unilateral decision to impose tariffs on steel products last year. L'Union européenne investit plus de 117 millions d'euros dans 39 projets clés dans le secteur des transports, qui contribueront à établir les connexions manquantes sur tout le continent, tout en mettant l'accent sur les modes de transport durables. Les projets permettront de réduire le bruit généré par les trains de marchandises, de développer et d'améliorer les liaisons ferroviaires transfrontalières et de moderniser des infrastructures portuaires essentielles. La commissaire en charge des transports, Violeta Bulc, a déclaré: « Nous concrétisons nos engagements visant à rendre les transports plus durables, plus sûrs et plus intelligents. La décision prise aujourd'hui donne un nouvel élan à la transition vers une mobilité à faibles émissions en Europe – en commençant par nos chemins de fer et nos ports. » Les projets seront soutenus par le mécanisme pour l'interconnexion en Europe \(MIE\), le mécanisme financier de l'UE destiné à soutenir les infrastructures de transport. Au total, le programme a maintenant permis le soutien de 795 projets pour un montant total de 22,3 milliards d'euros, mobilisant un investissement total de 47,1 milliards d'euros dans le secteur des transports. Juncker Plan supports Polish businesses with record European Investment Bank Group deal

PKO Leasing, the largest leasing company in Poland, launched today the largest securitisation transaction on the Polish market with the support of the European Investment Bank Group and the Juncker Plan. The company sold PLN 2.5 billion (€575 million) of asset-backed securities to a pool of international investors, which includes the EIB Group, Citi Bank and others. Elżbieta Bieńkowska, European Commissioner for Internal Market, Industry, Entrepreneurship and SMEs, said: "This agreement will make a big difference for thousands of emerging and growing businesses in Poland in need of financial support. Under the Juncker Plan, already more than 55,000 Polish SMEs and startups are benefitting from improved access to finance. Juncker Plan: Structural Reform Support Service and European Investment Bank join forces to provide advisory services and improve investment climate

The European Commission's Structural Reform Support Service (SRSS) and the European Investment Bank's (EIB) Advisory Services Department have stepped up their cooperation in providing support to EU Member States. Following the declaration of intent signed today, the SRSS and the EIB, via the European Investment Advisory Hub, will collaborate closely to provide technical support and advice to Member States on a broad range of policy areas. The overall objective of this partnership is to continue improving Member States' business environments by removing barriers to investment, which is a crucial part of the Juncker Plan. The SRSS and the Advisory Hub will work together to provide expertise to Member States' authorities in areas such as public-private partnerships, support to national promotional banks and institutions, financial instruments and platforms, environmental and other sectoral reforms. For example, the partners can collaborate on designing support measures, providing advisory services and impact evaluation. The Structural Reform Support Service offers tailor-made support to all EU countries for the preparation, design and implementation of growth-enhancing reforms. The support is provided on the request of Member States, requires no co-financing and mobilises experts from all over Europe and beyond, from both the public and the private sector. The European Investment Advisory Hub is a joint initiative of the European Commission and the EIB which acts as a single point of access to advisory services to make projects ready for investment, using expertise of the EIB Group, the European Commission and other relevant institutions and services. (For more information: Annika Breidhardt – Tel.: +32 229 56153; Annikky Lamp – Tel.: +32 229 56151; Siobhán Millbright – Tel.: +32 229 57361)

EU beef exports to Korea resume after almost 20 years

After almost 20 years and thanks to consistent efforts undertaken jointly by the European Commission and EU Member States, the Republic of Korea lifted its import restrictions on beef and beef products from the European Union. Producers from Denmark and the Netherlands will be the first ones to be able to resume exports. Commissioner for trade, Cecilia Malmström, said: “Trade isn't just about doing trade deals. After many years of hard work this announcement means that Dutch and Danish farmers gain a new market to sell their beef. Once again the EU is delivering for our agricultural sector.” Commissioner Vytenis Andriukaitis, in charge of health and food safety, welcomed this announcement, stressing that “this is another sign that trade partners acknowledge that the battle against BSE has been won and that the quality of EU's beef and beef products is recognised around the world. Additional access to this important market is excellent news for EU producers!” Commissioner for agriculture, Phil Hogan, said: “This is a very welcome development and an important statement of confidence by the South Korean authorities in the safety and quality of European beef. Following confirmation of access for Danish and Dutch operators, I hope that it won't be long before operators in other EU Member States are approved for export to this important and valuable market. Securing access for other EU Member States will continue to be a priority for the European Commission in bilateral trade relations with Korea.” The removal of the trade restrictions imposed in 2001 in reaction to the bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE) outbreak is a sign of well-deserved trust in the EU's comprehensive, multi-layered and very efficient food safety and animal health control system. A full press release is available online, along with more information on EU agricultural exports and the EU food safety system. (For more information:

Criminal justice: Commission evaluates Member States' efforts in making sure suspects of crime get a fair trial

Today, the European Commission published its implementation report on one of the six EU procedural rights directives, notably the EU Access to a lawyer directive. This Directive ensures people have the right to have a lawyer from the first stage of police questioning and throughout criminal proceedings, as well as to adequate, confidential meetings with the lawyer. This is essential to guarantee that every suspect of crime gets a fair trial. The report concludes that considerable progress has been made in the protection of fair trial rights in the EU, but also that Member States still have a lot of work to do. Věra Jourová, Commissioner for Justice, Consumers and Gender Equality said: “Across the EU, every year 9 million people face criminal proceedings. People may be found guilty or not guilty in the end. What matters is that they have a fair trial. Our EU procedural rights guarantee this, but Member States must ensure these agreed rights are secured in practice. Correctly applying these rules in all EU countries is also crucial to ensure tools such as the European arrest warrant can function well.” Particular points of attention concern the situations when exceptionally and temporarily suspects would not have the right to access a lawyer, and the rules on when and how citizens can waive their access to a lawyer, as well as conditions for how people can access a lawyer in the issuing Member State of a European arrest warrant. The Commission will continue to assess Member States' compliance with the Directive and take every appropriate measure, including possible infringement proceedings, to ensure conformity with the provisions of the Directive throughout the European Union. The EU Agency for Fundamental Rights is also publishing a report today looking at the challenges defendants face in exercising some of their rights, with a focus on eight Member States. Today's Commission report, a factsheet and more information about the six procedural rights directives will be available online. La Commission européenne a identifié la prévention du gaspillage alimentaire comme priorité essentielle dans la construction d'une économie circulaire et d'une société durable. Pour changer les habitudes, nous devons être en mesure de mesurer correctement le gaspillage alimentaire. Dès lors, grâce à la méthode commune mise en place, les États membres seront en mesure de quantifier les déchets alimentaires, de manière cohérente et à chaque étape de la chaîne d'approvisionnement alimentaire. Sur la base d'une définition commune du gaspillage alimentaire, la méthodologie garantira une surveillance cohérente dans l'ensemble de l'UE. Le commissaire Vytenis Andriukaitis s'est félicité de l'entrée en vigueur de la législation comme un pas décisif: « La lutte contre le gaspillage alimentaire est un impératif moral. Il est essentiel pour la durabilité de notre planète et pour le bon fonctionnement de nos systèmes alimentaires. L'UE est attachée à l'objectif global consistant à réduire de moitié le gaspillage alimentaire d'ici à 2030. Grâce à cette nouvelle méthodologie européenne, nous pouvons maintenant mesurer où nous en sommes, évaluer l'efficacité de nos actions et suivre nos progrès. Pour le dire très simple: Ce qui est mesuré, est géré! » La Commission suivra de près la mise en œuvre de cet acte délégué, en organisant des échanges réguliers avec les États membres afin de faciliter son déploiement et de partager les leçons apprises sur le terrain. Sur la base de cette méthodologie, les États membres doivent mettre en place un cadre de suivi avec 2020 comme première année de référence afin de fournir à la Commission les premières nouvelles données sur le gaspillage alimentaire d'ici à la mi-2022. Cette méthodologie partagée au niveau de l'UE contribuera à harmoniser la génération de données sur les niveaux de gaspillage alimentaire par les entreprises et contribuera au l'objectif de développement durable 12.3. State aid: Commission approves prolongation of Belgian and French state guarantees on Dexia's senior debt beyond 2021

The European Commission has approved, under EU State aid rules, the prolongation of Belgian and French State guarantees on the senior debt of Dexia, which is in orderly wind-down. In 2012, Belgium, France and Luxembourg provided state support for the orderly wind-down of Dexia. The state support was approved by the Commission under EU State aid rules on the basis of a wind-down plan that included a capital increase, as well as the possibility of providing State guarantees on Dexia's senior debt until 31 December 2021. In June 2019, Belgium and France notified to the Commission their plan to extend the possibility to provide State guarantees on Dexia's senior debt until 31 December 2031, to continue winding-down the group. Based on the notified plan, the remuneration fees to be paid by Dexia to the Belgian and French States for the prolonged State guarantees (after 2021) will fully ensure that burden-sharing requirements for subordinated creditors are met. On this basis, the Commission has approved the prolongation of Dexia's senior debt State guarantees beyond 2021 under EU State aid rules. More information will be available on the Commission's competition website, in the public case register, under the case numbers SA.53554 and SA.53592. Criminal justice: Joint statement on the launch of EU-US negotiations to facilitate access to electronic evidence European Commission and U.S. Department of Justice officials met yesterday to begin formal negotiations on an EU-U.S. agreement to facilitate access to electronic evidence in criminal investigations. European Commissioner for Justice, Consumers and Gender Equality, Věra Jourová said: “I welcome the start of formal negotiations. Criminals use fast, modern technologies to organise their crimes and cover up their evidence. We need to work together with our American partners to speed up the access of our law enforcement authorities to this evidence. This will strengthen our security, while protecting the data privacy and procedural safeguards of our citizens. The launch of negotiations marks an important step towards achieving this." U.S. Attorney General, William Barr said: "We are pleased that the Council adopted a mandate to authorise the Commission to negotiate an agreement with the United States on facilitating access to certain e-evidence, and that we have obtained authorisation to negotiate with the European Union. This type of agreement can enhance public safety and national security by providing an improved and more rapid ability to identify and respond to criminal threats on both sides of the Atlantic, in a manner that assures respect for the rule of law, privacy, and civil liberties. The U.S. is committed to working with the E.U. on this important issue." After a productive first discussion, there was agreement to regular negotiating rounds with the view to concluding an agreement as quickly as possible. Progress will be reviewed at the next EU-U.S. Justice and Home Affairs Ministerial in December. More information here. "My heart, your heart": Statement ahead of World Heart Day by Commissioner for Health and Food Safety, Vytenis Andriukaitis

On the occasion of the World Heart Day taking place on 29 September Commissioner for Health and Food Safety, Vytenis Andriukaitis said: "'Your heart and my heart, Are very, very old friends', wrote 14th century poet Hafez. The poem honours human soul connection. It is therefore no surprise that the theme of this year's World Heart Day that aims to create a global community of 'Heart Heroes', echoes the invisible links between people all over the world acting now to live better, longer, heart-healthy lives. I invite each of us to connect to our hearts and those of others and take care of them: by eating healthier food, exercising more, consuming less alcohol, saying no to smoking, and helping our loved ones to quit. In the European Union, almost 49 million people live with cardiovascular disease, meaning almost every tenth person! In addition to the devastating consequences on the lives of individuals, cardiovascular diseases also pose a staggering economic burden to society – almost 210 billion euros a year. Throughout my mandate I advocated for lifestyle choices by encouraging healthy nutrition through food reformulation, better protection of children and adolescents from too much exposure to marketing of foods high in energy, saturated fats, trans-fatty acids, sugars and/or salt, promoting public procurement of healthy food in schools. I know this work will continue. (...) Still, more can be done: I call upon Member States to intensify their efforts on risk factors since many cardiovascular diseases are preventable. And, I also call upon each one of us individually: connect with your heart, keep it healthy." Full statement is available here. EU beef exports to Korea resume after almost 20 years

After almost 20 years, the Republic of Korea lifted its import restrictions on beef and beef products from some European Union Member States. Producers from Denmark and the Netherlands are the first ones to be able to resume exports.

Commissioner for trade, Cecilia Malmström, said: "Trade isn't just about doing trade deals. After many years of hard work this announcement means that Dutch and Danish farmers gain a new market to sell their beef. Once again the EU is delivering for our agricultural sector."

Commissioner Vytenis Andriukaitis, in charge of health and food safety, welcomed this announcement, stressing that "this is another sign that trade partners acknowledge that the battle against BSE has been won and that the quality of EU's beef and beef products is recognised around the world. Additional access to this important market is excellent news for EU producers!"

Commissioner for agriculture, Phil Hogan, said: "This is a very welcome development and an important statement of confidence by the South Korean authorities in the safety and quality of European beef. Following confirmation of access for Danish and Dutch operators, I hope that it won't be long before operators in other EU Member States are approved for export to this important and valuable market. Securing access for other EU Member States will continue to be a priority for the European Commission in bilateral trade relations with Korea.”

The opening of the Korean market has been possible thanks to consistent efforts undertaken jointly by the European Commission and EU Member States. The removal of the trade restrictions imposed in 2001 in reaction to the bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE) outbreak is a sign of well-deserved trust in the EU’s comprehensive, multi-layered and very efficient food safety and animal health control system. The Commission will continue to work closely with the Korean authorities to secure market access for the remaining Member States that are still awaiting export approval for beef and beef products. During a meeting held on 4 September 2019 on sanitary and phytosanitary issues, Korean authorities provided assurances that the pending applications from EU Member States (others than Denmark and the Netherlands) would be processed in due time.

The EU and Korea are since 2011 linked by a trade agreement and the European Commission looks forward to ensuring that both parties are able to realise the full potential of this agreement.

The EU-Korea trade agreement has helped intensify exchanges, resolve numerous trade impediments on both sides and increase bilateral agri-food trade by 10% per year. Now, that the sanitary restrictions on Danish and Dutch beef are lifted, producers from those countries will finally be able to enjoy the tariff reductions available under the agreement.

I know this work will continue.

In the Tartu Call for a Healthy Lifestyle, together with Commissioners Navracsics and Hogan we've made 15 commitments to promote healthy lifestyles through sport, food, innovation or research. Two years later, the first results clearly show that the Commission is using more funds, raises more awareness and gathers more knowledge to tackle unhealthy diets, obesity or physical inactivity.

The Commission also works with the Member States to support them in reaching the targets of the World Health Organisation and the Sustainable Development Goals, with an overall aim to reduce premature mortality from non-communicable diseases. To meet these targets, we need much more focus on promotion and prevention, and we need to work across sectors and create stronger synergies between different EU programmes and policies.

As result of our discussions with country health representatives, large-scale projects to increase healthier lifestyle practices are being rolled out in different countries: for example, there are projects related to heart health screening for general practitioners prescribing physical activity instead of pills.
