

Green Party deputy leader welcomes electric Mini launch

9 July 2019

Amelia Womack, deputy leader of the Green Party of England and Wales, has welcomed today's launch of the first battery electric production Mini in Oxford.

She said: "It is clear that the future of motorised transport has to be fossil fuel-free. In the UK we've been left far behind countries whose governments have pushed further and farther in this age of climate emergency, but this is a step forward.

"We need to see our infrastructure – charging points and renewable electricity generation – also catching up with the best continental standards.

"But it is crucial that while we celebrate this progress, we also acknowledge that an electric car occupies exactly the same amount of space on the road as one powered by an internal combustion engine.

"Its negative environmental impacts are also significant – particulate pollution from tyres and brakes, loss of space in our cities and congestion.

"The future of transport is founded on 'active' transport, walking and cycling, and for longer distance built on affordable, convenient, reliable public transport, particularly buses.

"One-for-one replacement is neither possible, nor desirable."

Tweet

Back to main news page

Let's block ads! \(Why?\)

Green Party stands firmly behind March for Change in London on July 20th

3 July 2019

The Green Party is strongly backing the March for Change, which is saying “stop the Brexit chaos”, in London on July 20th, with many members from around the country expected to travel to the capital to show their passionate support.

Sian Berry, co-leader of the Green Party of England and Wales, said:

“With the Tories careering the country towards a disastrous no-deal Brexit, it’s never been more important to come together to celebrate our place in the European Union, and show the next Prime Minister that there’s no public mandate for crashing out.

“The levels of inequality and injustice across Britain are unforgivable, and millions were right to demand change. But Brexit is not the solution.

“Greens have been unwavering in our support of Britain’s place in the European Union. We won’t apologise, we won’t compromise and we won’t capitulate to the far right.

“On July 20th, we are proud to march in solidarity with millions across the continent who know we are all citizens of the world.”

Notes

(1) <https://www.marchforchange.uk/>

Tweet

Back to main news page

Let’s block ads! \(Why?\)

Greens back Good Systems Agreement on constitutional reform

2 July 2019

Jonathan Bartley, co-leader of the Green Party of England and Wales, will tonight join representatives from many other parties and civil society groups at Westminster to sign the party up to the Good Systems Agreement (1) prepared by Make Votes Matter.

Jonathan will say:

“In 1867, the Representation of the People Act saw a massive expansion of the male franchise. That came about after an unusual parliamentary event: opposition amendments to a Tory government bill were not resisted. This was a cross-party effort that led to a shifting of the tectonic plates under British politics.

“People in the future might well look back to this event and see in it the seeds of the same scale of transformation, with a similar approach.”

He added:

“It is very tempting to blame individuals for the disastrous state of Britain today, the Brexit chaos, the poverty and inequality, the insecurity and mental health crisis, the dreadful state of our natural world and the climate chaos. But it is clear that the failure is systemic.

“That the people are desperate to “take back control” of their communities, their lives, their futures, is no surprise at all. Our antique, undemocratic system has shut so many out of politics for so long.”

Note:

(1)<https://www.makevotesmatter.org.uk/good-systems-agreement>

Tweet

Back to main news page

Let's block ads! \(Why?\)

People serving their country deserve better treatment, says Green co-leader on Armed Forces Day

29 June 2019

Marking Armed Forces Day, Jonathan Bartley, co-leader of the Green Party said:

“Today’s focus very much should be on the people who make up our armed forces, both those now serving and those who have contributed in the past.

“My father served on D-Day. My uncle was a Spitfire pilot in the Battle of Britain.

“I think they’d both be horrified by yesterday’s report from the Public Accounts Committee saying that still a third of service personnel are not happy with the quality of their housing, and by the statistics showing that at least 50,000 former servicepeople are coping with mental health conditions and 6,000 have no permanent address.

“It is also disappointing that in provision of accommodation there is still discrimination between those who are married or in civil partnerships and those in long-term relationships.

“People serving their country deserve better treatment.”

Tweet

Back to main news page

Let’s block ads! \(Why?\)

Plastics Pact announcement ‘wholly inadequate’, says Green Party deputy leader

25 June 2019

Responding to the announcement from the UK Plastics Pact that its members will remove eight unnecessary plastic items from stores by the end of 2020 and “actively investigate” a second list of 19 items for sustainable alternatives by six years’ time (1),

Amelia Womack, deputy leader of the Green Party of England and Wales, said:

“Companies produce and sell about 76 kilogrammes of plastic that goes to waste each year in the UK for every woman, man and child in the country.

“Today’s response from industry and retailers is wholly, ridiculously, inadequate and doesn’t address public concern on plastics or effectively protect the environment.”

“Again and again the model of self-regulation has failed. This is one more area in which the government needs to step in with strong action.”

“The Green Party is calling for a ban on all unnecessary single-use plastics. That would address almost all of the throwaway plastics on our high streets.

“It is up to the companies who sell products, and profit from them, to find alternative forms of distribution and packaging and take responsibility for the impact of their actions in our oceans, food chains and landscapes.”

(1) <https://www.itv.com/news/2019-06-25/eight-plastic-items-marked-for-elimination-from-shelves-by-end-of-2020/>

Tweet

Back to main news page

Let's block ads! \(Why?\)