

Green Party calls for robust international response to military coup in Myanmar

1 February 2021

The Green Party is backing calls for a robust international response to the military coup in Myanmar. Co-leader Jonathan Bartley said:

“It’s unthinkable that off the back of a democratic election, a military led group should be able to shut down state media, arrest politicians and human rights activists and declare a state of emergency, all while the global community looks on.

“We’re calling for the release of these prisoners and respect for the result of the 2020 election. We also want to see the UK government impose sanctions against military owned companies in Myanmar.”

Tweet

Back to main news page

Let’s block ads! \(Why?\)

Green Party urges UK government to publish AstraZeneca contract

29 January 2021

- Jonathan Bartley: “We need to be struggling together against Covid, not battling each other for vaccine supplies”

The Green Party has called on the UK government to follow the EU [1] and make public its contract with AstraZeneca in order to stop the worrying battle over coronavirus vaccines.

Green Party co-leader Jonathan Bartley has called for solidarity across Europe in the allocation of vaccine supplies to ensure that the most vulnerable European citizens are protected.

Bartley said:

“The principle that we allocate medicines and health care based on need not based on power or ability to pay is the central principle of the NHS that we all value so highly.

“We need to be struggling together against Covid, not battling each other for vaccine supplies. A trade war over vaccines can only lead to some of the most vulnerable in our communities suffering.

“It’s clear that we need strong political action to prevent profiteering at the expense of public health. In such a vital area as Covid vaccination that means we need contracts to be made public, including the UK’s contract with AstraZeneca, to prevent pharmaceutical companies engaging governments in a bidding war for such a precious resource.

“We would also argue for all Covid vaccines to be sold on the basis of open patents so that manufactures can be rolled out at speed across the world, especially when the science behind the vaccine development was funded at public expense.

“While our appeal for vaccine sharing is based on a moral principle it is also rooted in enlightened self-interest. The European market has been our primarily pharmaceutical market for 40 years now and this means that we depend on European supplies of crucial drugs that we import from the EU.”

ENDS

Notes

1

https://ec.europa.eu/commission/presscorner/detail/en/ip_21_302

2

The government requested drug suppliers to build up six-week stockpiles ahead of Brexit on 31 December, which may mean supplies need replenishing around the middle of February

Tweet

Back to main news page

Let's block ads! \(Why?\)

Greens warn banning campaigning hinders free and fair elections

26 January 2021

- Jonathan Bartley: “For any election to be free and fair then it is vital political parties have the ability to campaign so the public can engage with the choices on offer”

The Green Party has warned of the threat to democracy as a result of the Government’s advice that on the ground campaigns for this year’s local elections should stop

Cabinet Office Minister Chloe Smith has this week written to political parties saying door to door campaigning was “neither essential nor necessary”. [1]

The Green Party has followed public health and legal guidance in recent weeks in order to deliver community support and advice to residents who may be struggling or digitally excluded. The feedback has been exceptionally positive. Local councillors have helped residents in accessing hot meals, parents in need of laptops for home schooling and isolated residents have access to befriending opportunities.

Green Party co-leader Jonathan Bartley said:

“Democracy is a process, not a one off event. For any election to be free and fair then it is vital political parties have the ability to campaign so the public can engage with the choices on offer, but at the moment the Conservatives in Government are saying traditional campaigning at the grass roots level should effectively cease.

“There are serious questions about who is empowered to make such a decision in a democracy. To avoid conflicts of interest this should be decided by a body such as the Electoral Commission, not a party that stands to gain from the decision.

“Greens want elections to be held as soon as it is practically safe for the whole democratic process to take place, including community campaigning, which is a crucial part of allowing people to have a genuine choice of parties to vote for. That may mean we have to delay the May elections.”

ENDS

Notes

1

https://inews.co.uk/news/politics/political-parties-suspend-leafletting-door-campaigning-covid-842152?fbclid=IwAR2jfXGI8Cd8JzXbB0ucL3b-N4z8lxpYSBVNs20V2jAmT_FTQ_OPG8z0yH8

Tweet

Back to main news page

Let's block ads! \(Why?\)

Greens condemn latest delay to

Environment Bill

26 January 2021

The Green Party has condemned the government's decision to delay the Environment Bill for the third time today. [1]

MPs will debate amendments to the Bill in the House of Commons this afternoon, but the government has said further discussions will not go ahead until the next Parliamentary session.

Sian Berry, Green Party co-leader and Mayor of London candidate, said:

"This government says it will prioritise the environment, but once again when it comes to taking action they delay and disappoint. Boris Johnson has spoken about building back better, yet his government cannot even be bothered to make sure this crucial piece of legislation goes ahead in a timely manner.

"As it stands, the Bill is too weak in a number of areas, but that is why it is absolutely vital that parliamentarians, including the Green Party's Caroline Lucas, are able to table amendments and debate it urgently.

"This Bill provides an opportunity for the government to enshrine into law policy that we desperately need to tackle the climate and nature emergencies. The environment can't wait and we need to see the government back up its rhetoric with legislation"

ENDS

Notes

1

<https://www.bbc.co.uk/news/uk-politics-55799191>

Tweet

Back to main news page

Greens warn UK is “paying the price” for government failure on floods

21 January 2021

- Amelia Womack: “People are paying the price for decades of tokenistic action when it comes to flood risk management”

The Green Party has accused the government of chronic failure over its inadequate response to flooding.

As Storm Christoph caused devastation in parts of England and Wales [1], Green Party Deputy Leader Amelia Womack has said the UK and Welsh governments must immediately implement a long-term plan to improve natural flood defences and reassess planning regulations which still allow for new buildings on flood plains.

Womack said:

“Every year, flooding across the UK impacts families and businesses. To add to this devastation, this year it comes 10 months into a global pandemic putting added strain on individuals and communities.

“Climate change increases our likelihood of extreme and damaging weather across the country. Yet, the government’s announcements of further funding for flood defences are more often than not too little, too late and lack a practical plan for the future.

“Concrete flood defences after an event won’t solve the impact the climate and ecological emergency is having on our flood risk. We need a long-term vision to reassess how we work with the land by improving natural flood defences, and working with our environment which has been proven to be far more effective.

“Given this happens every year we need to adapt our planning system to the climate changed world and recognise that we can no longer build homes and commercial premises on floodplains.

“People are paying the price for decades of tokenistic action when it comes to flood risk management. We need the UK government to start showing true global leadership by introducing the policies that will reduce our carbon emissions as soon as possible and restore our ecosystems. Taking real climate action will not only help reduce the impact of climate change, but will also help us create thousands of good quality jobs in our communities.”

Greater Manchester is one of the areas hit hardest by the latest storm.

Melanie Horrocks, Green Party candidate for Mayor of Greater Manchester, said:

“My thoughts are with everyone affected by these floods, which have come at the worst possible time. A huge thanks to the staff of local councils, dealing with yet another front line emergency. Councils have been stretched more than ever over the past year, and now have to deal with this at the same time. It makes it all the more important that the government provides more support for councils, for businesses affected, and for those who will end up self-isolating as a result.

“The planning system makes it far too easy for flooding risks to be increased. This week should be a wake-up call for those wanting to build on vast swathes of the green belt across Greater Manchester. All public funds need to be divested away from fossil fuels investments, and the only responsible approach for the future of Greater Manchester is one which includes reduced airport use, not expansion.

“Yet again, records are being broken by the consequences of extreme weather. This is the new normal. Politicians at every level need to step up, urgently, to stop climate change spiralling beyond anything we can influence.”

ENDS

Notes