

Stonewall's findings are deeply concerning. Transphobia is not OK and will never be OK – Dawn Butler

Dawn Butler MP, Shadow Minister for Women and Equalities, commenting on the publication of Stonewall's LGBT in Britain: Trans Report, said:

"Stonewall's findings are deeply concerning. Transphobia is not OK and will never be OK.

"Labour is committed to tackling this issue and to supporting the Trans community. We urge the government to ensure that the new guidance being developed on Sex and Relationship Education is LGBT+ inclusive.

"Reforming the Gender recognition Act will be key to ensuring Trans equality. But we are still waiting on the government to publish the consultation on updating the Act. The government must follow through on its commitment to reform."

It is deeply regrettable that the Government has refused a review into the Worboys case – Richard Burgon

Richard

Burgon MP, Labour's Shadow Justice Secretary, following the announcement by the Justice Secretary on the John Worboys case, said:

"Many will be very disappointed by today's news. The Government needs to take measures that restore public confidence in our justice system. It's clear that there is a pressing need for real changes that will make Parole Board decisions much more transparent.

“But the Worboys case raises so many serious questions that anything less than an independent end-to-end review into the handling of the case—from the first report to the police of an attack right through to the Parole Board hearing—would let down the victims and the wider public. It is deeply regrettable that the Government once again refused to announce such a review.”

Jonathan Ashworth response to the National Audit Office's report on sustainability and transformation in the NHS

Jonathan Ashworth MP, Labour's Shadow Health Secretary, commenting on the National Audit Office's report on sustainability and transformation in the NHS, said:

“The

NAO's report confirms the Government's flawed and wholly inadequate approach to the sustainable, long term funding of the NHS. Ministers have failed to increase per head spending in real terms each year, a key election promise, and there are still no details of a long overdue pay rise for NHS staff.

“Our

NHS is in crisis. Years of underinvestment culminated in December 2017 being the worst month on record for A&E performance and elective operations being cancelled until the end of January. Targets are being missed and in-year cash injections are not improving the financial performances of Trusts.

the Tories, Labour outlined a costed long term plan for funding the NHS.

Labour

will give our NHS an extra £6 billion a year to ensure that our NHS remains a world class service for all.”

Nia Griffith responds to the Public Accounts Committee report

Nia

Griffith MP, Labour's Shadow Defence Secretary, responding to the Public Accounts

Committee report on Delivering Carrier Strike, said:

"This report

highlights the significant concerns about the affordability of a key part of the MoD's equipment plan and a vital aspect of our future defence capability.

"The

Government needs to address this issue urgently and ensure that the Carrier programme is adequately funded going forward, in particular the F-35s which need to be paid for in US dollars and will be impacted by fluctuating foreign exchange rates.

"It's

reassuring that MoD staff have told the Committee that they do not plan to take the Albion class out of service early. The Defence Secretary should stop dodging questions about the future of the vessels and confirm that he will not be selling them off. The loss of this class without replacement would be an unacceptable cut to our nation's defences."

Yasmin Quereshi responds to Government consultation announcement into HM Courts & Tribunals Service estate

Yasmin

Quereshi MP, Labour's Shadow Justice Minister, responding to the Government's announcement of a consultation into the HM Courts and Tribunals Service estate, said:

"This

consultation should not be a smokescreen for yet more court closures and staff losses which would further undermine local access to our justice system.

“Tory cuts have already led to the closure of hundreds of courts and the axing of thousands of court staff.

“There are obvious fears that this consultation is just part of the Government’s plan to cut hundreds of millions of pounds more from the Ministry of Justice budget by 2020.

“The Government should not proceed with any further court closures until its promised Courts Bill is published and its reforms can be subjected to full parliamentary scrutiny.”
