

Thousands of young people set to benefit from new support into work and training

Thousands of young people across England will receive targeted support into work, under a new £45 million scheme launched by the Work and Pensions Secretary.