

UK invests in homegrown space tech to boost national resilience

British businesses, universities and researchers will receive access to more than £62 million in government funding to develop homegrown space technologies, boosting the UK's national resilience and helping protect its indep...