

UK launches world-first study to assess antibiotic resistance levels in healthy dogs and cats

The study aims to provide key information essential for reducing the development and spread of disease resistant infections.