Green Party stands with Black Lives Matter every step of the way

4 June 2020

Green Party deputy leader Amelia Womack has outlined the party's support for the Black Lives Matter movement in the wake of the death of George Floyd.

In a video published today, Womack spoke of the need to dismantle structural racism and repeated the Greens' call for an independent inquiry into the disproportionate impact of Covid-19 of communities of colour.

The full video can be viewed here.

Below is a full transcipt:

The killing of George Floyd has sparked a wave of resistance around the world, and the Green Party stands with the Black Lives Matter movement every step of the way.

In the UK, it's common to hear people say that racism isn't as bad here as it is in America.

So I'm just going to say a FEW names.

Stephen Lawrence. No justice for decades.

Christopher Alder. Choked and died while handcuffed and lying face down on the floor of a police station.

Belly Mujinga. One of the disproportionate number of BAME people who have died of Coronavirus, with no protection at work.

We're still deporting people to their deaths, two years after Windrush.

We've still got tower blocks ready to go up in flames, three years after Grenfell.

Make no mistake. Britain has a bloody history of racism.

It's a history which limits the lives of every person of colour living in Britain today.

And it's a system which benefits white people like me.

So don't just share this video. It's not enough.

We need to dismantle structural racism together.

Donate to legal funds and mutual aid groups. Demand a public inquiry into BAME Covid-19 deaths.

Most importantly, amplify Black voices, listen, educate ourselves and join the fight for a better world for people of colour everywhere.

Not just today, not just this week. Every day. Until we win. Black lives matter.

Green Party demands independent BAME Covid-19 inquiry

3 June 2020

- Greens of Colour call for independent inquiry to factor in institutional racism
- Azzees Minott: "The government's inquiry into the impact of Covid-19 on BAME people has let communities of colour down"

The Green Party has backed calls for an independent inquiry into the disproportionate impact of Covid-19 on black, Asian and minority ethnic people.

Greens of Colour chairperson Azzees Minott said: "The government's inquiry into the impact of Covid-19 on BAME people has let communities of colour down.

"It has been clear from the start that this review simply was not going to go far enough because it was never going to address the institutional racism that affects people of colour, particularly in the context of Covid-19.

"We have known since the beginning of this crisis that communities of colour are more at risk because of the social injustices that result in wide health, housing and employment inequalities within society.

"It is simply not acceptable that this report deliberately left out the impact of public health cuts, the experience of BAME frontline staff and the effectiveness of government messaging.

"It is also extremely worrying to hear reports that Matt Hancock's office may have removed key parts of the report which showed how discrimination and poorer life chances played a part in the increased risk to communities of colour. [1]

"We are backing the wider calls for an independent inquiry. It is time for the demands of the We Need Answers campaign to be heard." [2]

Schools should not reopen until coronavirus tests have been clearly met, says Green Party

29 May 2020

The Green Party has urged local authorities not to fall in line with the Government's timetable for reopening schools until the conditions for easing lockdown have been clearly met.

Green Party education spokesperson Vix Lowthion, who is also a teacher on the Isle of Wight, has said the health and wellbeing of staff and pupils is being put at risk by reopening schools before it is safe to do so.

Lowthion said:

"Reopening schools on Monday will have an enormous impact on the health and wellbeing of thousands of families across the country, and so it is vital that any decision to do so is based on clear scientific guidance.

"Unfortunately, while the Prime Minister claims that the five tests for easing lockdown have been met, the Government's Chief Scientific Adviser has said that the 'R rate' is still near 1. This simply does not make sense and it is not right that we are putting the lives of children and staff at risk based on such conflicting advice.

"The Independent SAGE group has also set out clearly why it is too soon to be opening schools. [1]

"The government's own five tests have a glaring omission of ensuring there is an adequate test, trace and isolate operation as recommended by the World Health Organisation [2]. We are simply nowhere near that yet and until that is in place it is not safe to reopen schools.

"We know there are real issues with inequality and some young people falling behind, but this is about weighing up the risks and putting people's health first, while doing everything we can to ensure those pupils who need more support can receive it in other ways.

"We are working with local Green parties and councillors across the country to put pressure on their local authorities not to fall in line with the Government's timetable on schools reopening. Local decision making is vitally important, particularly if authorities need to be able to respond to local lockdowns in the future."

Joint Biosecurity Centre: Greens sound alarm over civil liberties, data protection and scientific expertise

28 May 2020

Jonathan Bartley, co-leader of the Green Party of England and Wales, has written to Health Secretary Matt Hancock raising a series of concerns about the role of the Joint Biosecurity Centre. [1]

It follows the announcement yesterday of the need for local lockdowns and the role the centre would play. [2]

It has previously been reported that centre would closely follow the UK's anti-terrorism national security system. [3]

Bartley said:

"Rather than relying on the established expertise of Public Health England, Matt Hancock has chosen to establish a totally new body, the Joint Biosecurity Centre, about whom we know next to nothing but would play a significant part in local lockdowns.

"Such lockdowns would clearly impact fundamental civil rights and so it is vital that there is clarity and political accountability about who is making decisions about when and how such restrictions should be imposed and then lifted, and how they will be scrutinised

"It is essential that its membership is made public, together with information about its members, how they have been selected, on what basis and particularly whether they have scientific or medical expertise.

"So far the only public information is that the body will be led by Tom Hurd. We know very little about him, other than that he is a leading candidate to take over as the next director general of MI6. "Putting this together with concerns about the acquisition and storage of highly personal health data rings alarm bells about our civil liberties."

Public should also be applauded at tonight's Clap for Carers, says Green Party MP Caroline Lucas

- Caroline Lucas MP calls for tonight's Clap for Carers to also be for the public, in recognition of the huge sacrifices people have made to keep others safe
- Lucas says coronavirus crisis has shown our extraordinary capacity for compassion and generosity as she calls for green recovery and renewal
- Lucas: "If we the people show the lead, we can force even this Government to do the right thing."

Green Party MP Caroline Lucas has said the public should also applaud each other at what is expected to be the final weekly Clap for Carers tonight [Thursday 28 May], in recognition of the huge sacrifices people have made to keep others safe.

In a speech to launch the party's campaign for a green recovery from the coronavirus crisis, [1], Lucas said that the courage and solidarity of the British public throughout the crisis has stood in sharp contrast to the country's leadership.

The coronavirus crisis has seen people make huge, often harrowing, personal sacrifices. And it has also seen hundreds of thousands of volunteers willing to risk their lives to help out millions of key workers putting duty and compassion above their own safety and the mutual aid movement bringing together communities up and down our land.

Lucas said this collective effort has changed us as a nation and shown we can build the better future the public deserve, one where the climate is safer. The inclination to goodness is hard wired in humanity. Despite the danger, fear and terrible sadness caused by the pandemic, we can now finally demolish the miserable mythology of human selfishness. And we can harness this new energy to tackle the even bigger crisis we face, the climate crisis.

In the speech Lucas said:

"The courage and solidarity of the British people stands in stark contrast to the leadership our country has suffered during this crisis.

"And I think that's why we all feel so angry over the actions of Dominic Cummings. It's as if all those sacrifices are being thrown back in our faces.

"I share your fury in the face of the complacency, incompetence and dishonesty we have endured.

"But just as we have changed as a nation, as communities, as individuals we have to believe that if we apply the right pressure, if we the people show the lead, we can force even this Government to do the right thing."

The Green Party will be setting outs its proposals in the coming weeks as part of the campaign. It is calling for:

• A commitment to a green recovery including investment energy efficiency and clean transport in order to get people back to work and to modernise our economy

- Tapping into the energy and generosity shown by the people of Britain to give every part of the country the tools they need to build inclusive and sustainable places and communities.
- Putting people back at the heart of our democracy by ensuring all of us are partners in designing a better future for our nation.
- Extending the connections we have made in our communities so that we work together whatever our political beliefs
