

Government must publish their post-Brexit strategy to protect jobs in the finance sector – McDonnell

John McDonnell MP, Labour's Shadow Chancellor, commenting on reports that 100,000 jobs in the City of London are at risk due to the failure of the Tories' Brexit negotiations, said:

"This threat to 100,000 jobs was all too predictable given the Tories' extreme approach to the Brexit negotiations. This is yet another major concern facing our country since Theresa May triggered Article 50, and yet Tory ministers appear stunned and unprepared when obvious issues arise.

"We need to know immediately from the Government what its strategy is to protect jobs in the finance sector, because all we have witnessed so far is silent bewilderment.

"Labour will fight for a Brexit that works for everyone, unlike the hard right Tory elite who want a low-wage, tax-haven bargain basement economy. Our six tests, including preserving existing benefits of membership, must be met before Labour will support any Brexit deal."

Relationship support will not replace social security support stripped from struggling families – Cunningham

Alex Cunningham MP, Shadow Work and Pensions Minister, commented on the Government's plan to fund relationship support for unemployed families, said:

"Stronger relationships can help families to escape poverty, but the support announced today is a tiny response to funding the work that needs to be done to tackle rising inequality, child and pensioner poverty figures.

“All the evidence suggests that income is a central factor in poverty and inequality.

“Relationship support will not replace the social security support stripped from struggling families under seven years of failed Tory austerity.”

Use of chemical weapons by anyone cannot be tolerated – Thornberry

Emily

Thornberry MP, Labour’s Shadow Foreign Minister, commenting on the suspected chemical attack in Syria, said:

“This was a shocking and barbaric attack, and our thoughts are with all the victims and their loved ones.

“The use of chemical weapons by anyone cannot be tolerated, as the Syrian government itself accepted when it joined the Chemical Weapons Convention, and there must be no impunity for those found responsible.”

Tory Government is failing the victims of trafficking as statistics show rise – Abbott

Diane Abbott, Labour’s Shadow Home Secretary, responding to National Referral Mechanism statistics showing that child trafficking is rising, said,

“This Tory Government is failing the victims of trafficking.

“Recorded child trafficking has reached a record high, but these figures are still well below the Government’s own estimate. Meanwhile, decisions to provide support for victims have fallen to a record low.

“The Tories promised in their manifesto to tackle trafficking and child exploitation. Instead they have imposed even further cuts on the Border Force and police, the frontline in the fight against these horrific crimes.”

Notes to editor

1. Annual statistics on reports to the National Referral Mechanism show that in total there were 3,805 potential victims of trafficking in 2016; a 17% increase on 2015. However, child exploitation referrals rose by 30% to 1,278.

2. The figures also show that positive conclusive decisions – which enable victims to access support – decreased to 635, compared with 1,028 the previous year.

Jeremy Corbyn speech to launch Labour’s Local Election campaign

CHECK AGAINST DELIVERY**

Jeremy Corbyn, Leader of the Labour Party, will today launch Labour’s Local Election campaign and say:

Thank you for that introduction Bethany and for all that you do in mobilising our student members in Nottinghamshire.

Labour

depends on all its members to deliver our message of investment and social justice in every community across Britain.

Over

a quarter of a million more people joined Labour over the past eighteen months they saw Labour has broken with the failed politics of the past and that they could be part of a new project for real change: bold, confident and, yes, angry too.

Because

who wouldn't be angry?

When

they see people lying on trolleys in hospital corridors?

When

they see more and more people homeless on the streets?

When

they hear about a high street chain trying to pay young people in leftover food?

When

huge numbers of Sure Start centres have closed under the Tories?

Or

when class sizes are rising – as the Tories divert funds to grammar schools for a privileged few?

And

when social care for the elderly and disabled is in crisis – while the super-rich and big business get tax giveaways worth £73 billion?

How can you not be angry and demand major change when life expectancy projections have fallen in Britain for pensioners? We are a rich country, the sixth richest in the world. We are not at war, there is no epidemic sweeping our land.

But,

whether the Conservative Party chair can face the facts or not, life expectancy has actually fallen – by a year for 65-year-old women and 6 months for 65-year-old men – since 2013.

The

truth is that the Tories are running our country down.

Home

ownership, opportunities for our children, wages and conditions at work, the NHS, care for our elderly, and now, life expectancy: they're all going backwards, run down by a Conservative government that looks after those at the top and manages decline for the rest of us.

Britain

is a wealthy country but you wouldn't know it from the way people are held back in their everyday lives – from making a home for themselves and their families, building a career, pursuing their interests and ambitions.

Local

councils have made a huge difference to people's lives – providing libraries and leisure centres, schools, building houses, making sure the elderly have the support they need.

But

since 2010 councils have seen their funding cut by 40%.

Over

ninety percent of councils are putting up council tax this year to try to compensate for the huge cuts in the grant they get from government.

Meanwhile

police budgets are cut, social care budgets are cut, schools budgets are cut, Sure Start centres are closed, libraries are closed, houses aren't built.

Whole

communities are being held back and jobs, services and hope destroyed. But it doesn't have to be like this.

Labour

is standing up for you. In Westminster and in every community across the country.

Labour

councils are making a difference across the country. Stepping up where the Government fails to act.

Faced

with the growing housing crisis, Birmingham Council is delivering 30% of all new homes in the city. And Lancashire County Council has formed a joint venture to buy 800 affordable homes for sale and social rent.

Faced

with the crisis in social care 15 Labour councils have signed up to the Ethical Care Charter for minimum standards of safety, quality and dignity of care and improve pay and training for care workers. I signed it myself last week in Blyth.

Faced

with so many people struggling to make ends meet Liverpool council is setting up a not-for-profit energy company – “the Liverpool LECCy” – to sell gas and electricity at a lower cost, building on what’s been done down the road in Nottingham with Robin Hood Energy. And just west of here in Derbyshire the Labour Council’s Welfare Rights Service has helped local people claim £18 million in benefits they otherwise would have lost.

Faced

with the Government’s failure to invest in our economy the ‘Nottinghamshire Economic Development Capital Fund’ has lent £3.5 million to help more than 30 businesses secure good jobs in Nottinghamshire. And in Northumberland, the council-owned Arch property business generates jobs and homes, as well as a return of nearly £5m a year that supports council services like schools, roads and social care. I was really pleased to visit their Blyth Workspace site last week which offer huge opportunities.

Faced

with an epidemic of low pay 89 Labour councils have delivered the real Living Wage for council employees and contractors to ensure better wages for local people. I’m particularly proud that my own borough led the way on that.

These

are just a few examples of how Labour councils are standing up for you and why you need Labour to be in power in towns, counties and city regions as well as Westminster.

The

Conservatives justify tax cuts for the richest and big business by saying they will lead to an increase in investment. But in fact investment has fallen, leaving us with antiquated infrastructure and uncompetitive industries.

The

future of our country cannot be left to the free market and the whims of the wealthy.

That is why Labour will set up a national investment bank and regional development banks – including our ‘Bank of the North’ – to help unlock £500 billion to fund major capital projects and finance growth.

Our

plan will use public investment to build up new investment by the private sector. It means creating hundreds of thousands of good quality jobs in manufacturing and in green and other cutting-edge industries of the future.

As every successful business knows, there's nothing reckless about borrowing to invest quite the opposite.

Investment in infrastructure, skills, broadband and high speed rail generates growth and tax revenues. It more than pays for itself. This is just what the Welsh Government is doing with the launch of the Welsh Development Bank, which draws on 20 years of Labour experience in power.

At this crucial time we need to look to the future and ask ourselves what sort of country we want Britain to be.

Theresa May's Government is trying to use Brexit to turn Britain into a low-wage tax haven for big business.

We are offering a real alternative that reflects the priorities of the majority of our people to rebuild and transform Britain so that no one and no community is left behind.

Instead of a country run for the rich, we want to see one in which all of us can lead richer lives.

A Labour Government will end the rip-off on the railways and bring them into public ownership.

Labour will overturn the Government's ban on council-owned bus companies as part of a plan to put the public back into buses.

We'll stop the corporate tax cuts and make sure the tax dodgers pay their fair share.

We'll invest in our children's education and skills for our workers.

We'll give six million people a pay rise by introducing a real living wage of at least £10 an hour.

We'll

reinstate nurses' bursaries and give more people the chance to train to be nurses, so that the sick get the care they need.

We'll

invest in housing, building the homes our country needs, creating thousands of good construction jobs and apprenticeships and allowing councils to borrow to build council housing.

Together

we can create a Britain where each of us can lead richer lives investing in a better Britain, creating educational opportunity for all, guaranteeing the health and social care services you need, providing safer neighbourhoods and building homes people can afford.

In

the coming weeks of this campaign Labour will be setting out more of our policies to show how Labour will stand up for you.

This

election is your chance to send a message to the Tories: that you won't accept our NHS in crisis, your children's future betrayed, a deepening housing crisis, damaging cuts to the police and insecure jobs that don't make ends meet.

It

doesn't have to be like this. Things can and they will change.

So

use your vote for Labour on 4th May.
