

A 700,000 increase in the number of children and older people in poverty is totally unacceptable – Abrahams

Debbie Abrahams MP,
Shadow Work and Pensions Secretary, commenting on the Joseph Rowntree Foundation state of the nation report, said:

“A 700,000 increase in the number of children and older people in poverty is totally unacceptable.

“The last seven years of flat-lining wages and austerity cuts, now combined with sharply rising costs of household essentials is a truly terrifying prospect for millions trying to make ends meet. The cuts to Universal Credit, which were not addressed in the recent Budget and mean that ‘work does not always pay’, will push even more children and working age adults into poverty.

“Even the Government’s own social mobility commission has resigned over their failure to act.

“The Prime Minister should stand aside, and let Labour deliver a £10 an hour minimum wage, end zero hour contracts, transform our social security system and build the genuinely affordable homes Britain needs.”

Tories’ record on children & young people’s mental health has been shocking – Keeley

Barbara Keeley MP,
Labour’s Shadow Cabinet Minister for Mental Health, commenting on the announcement of measures contained within the new Children and Young People’s Green Paper, said:

“This

announcement leaves many unanswered questions, in particular whether the reported funding will amount to new investment and whether the incentives offered will lead to every school being able to offer proper mental health support to their pupils.

“What is clear, however, is that the Tories’ record on children and young people’s mental health has been shocking, with a postcode lottery of provision across Child and Adolescent Mental Health services and many long waits for treatment.

“The Tories can only be taken seriously on children and young people’s mental health by following Labour’s example and pledging to increase spending on these services, ring-fencing budgets and ensuring children and young people have access to a counselling service in every secondary school.”

Under the Tories, social mobility has totally stalled. It is no surprise the whole Social Mobility Commission has resigned in frustration – Trickett

Jon

Trickett MP, Labour’s Shadow Minister for the Cabinet Office, responding to the resignation of the Social Mobility Commission board, said:

“As inequality has grown under the Tories, social mobility has totally stalled. Theresa May has rewarded the rich whilst holding everyone else back. It is no surprise the whole Social Mobility Commission has resigned in frustration.

“Under the Tories, how well people do in life is still based on class background rather than on talent or effort.

“Labour will change our country so it works for the many not the few.”

RBS priority should be serving the best interests of UK customers – Reynolds

Jonathan Reynolds MP, Labour's Shadow City Minister, responding to the RBS jobs cuts announcement, said:

"The decision by RBS to close 1 in 4 of its outlets is hugely disappointing. Not only will this result in the potential loss of 1,000 jobs, but many people depend on being able to use bank branch facilities in person. As the taxpayer continues to own 71% of the bank, its priority should be serving the best interests of UK customers.

"We are astounded that the Government has signed off on these proposals and urge them to reconsider such a drastic move which risks serious harm to local communities. Labour will change bank regulations to stop branch closures where there is a clear impact on local communities and businesses."

Tories fail to meet net migration target yet again – Diane Abbott

Diane

Abbott MP, Labour's Shadow Home Secretary, commenting on today's ONS data showing net migration is at 230,000, said:

"This is yet another failure by the Tory government to meet its own unworkable net migration target.

"This isn't a genuine policy, but allows a permanent campaign against migrants and migration.

"The Tories' chaotic mishandling of the Brexit negotiations has already seen many sectors experiencing severe staff shortages, including the NHS and social care.

"It is time to drop this meaningless target. Labour offers fair rules and reasonable management of migration. Our priorities are growth, jobs and prosperity. We make no apologies for putting these aims before bogus immigration targets.”
