

The Government must ensure the safe return of Monarch passengers and provide the leadership that has so far been missing – Andy McDonald MP

Andy McDonald MP, Labour's Shadow Secretary of State for Transport, commenting on the cancellation of Monarch flights, said:

"The Government must do all it can to ensure the safe return of passengers and to make them aware of the compensation to which they are entitled.

"The Government should also look at how they can support Monarch staff, including by helping facilitate alternative employment in the aviation industry.

"With Ryanair recently cancelling thousands of flights, in part because of unfair treatment of staff, and Monarch having ceased trading, the sector is in a period of uncertainty. It is critical that the Government provides greater clarity.

"Our aviation sector is the largest in Europe but it is dependent on agreements secured through our EU membership. A failure to secure an essentially unchanged operating environment post-Brexit will mean grounded planes, cancelled holidays and disaster for UK aviation. The Government must provide the certainty and leadership that has so far been missing."

No new thinking from Sajid Javid after seven years of Tory failure on housing – Healey

John Healey MP, Labour's Shadow Secretary of State for Housing, responding to Sajid Javid's Conference speech:

"Theresa May admits seven years of Tory failure on housing was a big part of why her Party did so badly in the Election.

"Yet four months on, Sajid Javid's speech shows there's no new Tory thinking on housing.

His pledges are feeble and fail to offer help or hope to millions who can't get the home they need or aspire to.

"There's nothing new from the Conservatives which will tackle the country's housing crisis or fix the broken housing market. This is yet another speech that aims to help the few, not the many.

"Young people held back by a broken housing market don't need Theresa May's empty empathy but a consumer rights revolution for renters, new discount homes for first time buyers and the big-scale building programme of genuinely affordable homes to rent and buy that Labour set out in our Election manifesto."

Response to events in Catalonia – Thornberry

Emily

Thornberry MP, Labour's Shadow Foreign Secretary, commenting on events in Catalonia today, said:

"Police violence in Catalonia today is shocking, and the Spanish government should take action to end it now.

"While we believe disputes over sovereignty should be resolved in accordance with rules and laws, and any referendum on these issues needs to be both democratic and fair, it is unacceptable for the Spanish authorities to overreact to today's events through aggressive police action and the forcible closure of polling stations.

"They must respect the right to peaceful protest, and all sides must strive to come together and reach a political solution to this constitutional crisis. Violence of any sort will simply worsen divisions, and make a resolution harder to reach."

Empty words do nothing for those pushed into poverty by Universal Credit – Abrahams

Debbie

Abrahams MP, Shadow Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, commented on the Prime Minister's refusal to back Labour's call for a pause to Universal Credit on Marr saying;

"More empty words will do nothing for those being pushed into poverty by the Government's flagship social security programme.

"The six week wait for payment of Universal Credit is a punitive policy introduced by this Government, it can be changed.

"I wrote to the Secretary of State calling for a pause to Universal Credit roll out weeks ago, and yet nothing has been done.

"Months have passed since Mrs May claimed she would help those struggling to get by. We are yet to see anything that amounts to action to support the 13 million people living in poverty in the UK."

Young people held back by a broken housing market don't need Theresa May's gimmicks but the mass building programme of genuinely affordable

homes – Healey

John

Healey MP, Labour's Shadow Secretary of State for Housing, responding to the Tories' announcement to extend the Help to Buy scheme, said:

"This

is yet another policy from the Tories that will only help the few, not the many.

"Britain

is suffering from a housing crisis, with home ownership at a 30-year low and 900,000 fewer under 45s now owning a home since 2010.

"Young people held back by a broken housing market don't need Theresa May's gimmicks but the mass building programme of genuinely affordable homes to rent and buy that Labour put forward in our manifesto."
