

Eid Mubarak to all those celebrating!

I would like to send warm wishes to Muslims in the UK and around the world celebrating Eid al-Fitr.

Eid marks the end of the holy month of Ramadan – a month of prayer, personal reflection, and self-denial.

I'm sure that this Ramadan must have felt unusual and I know that observing a socially distanced Eid will not be easy either.

I'm sure that this Ramadan must have felt unusual and I know that observing a socially distanced Eid will not be easy either.

This year, I joined some of our MPs and party members in fasting for one day of Ramadan and this culminated in a Lib Dem Iftar – the first for our party. The fast was challenging at times, but I'm so proud that we were able to do this one small act as a symbol of our solidarity with British Muslims at this time.

I want to thank the doctors and nurses who have sacrificed their lives in the battle against COVID-19. We will always remember them, and we must never forget that many of them were British Muslims. A thorough investigation into why BAME communities have been disproportionately impacted by this virus is needed now more than ever.

Of course, Eid is known as “the Festival of the Breaking of the Fast”. It's usually a time to come together with loved ones to enjoy festive meals and share gifts but instead, people will remain isolated in their homes, going out only for essential food and brief periods of exercise. Though this will be tough, I'm sure that the sacrifices we all make now will reduce the impact of this virus.

So to everyone celebrating Eid, I wish you joy and peace. Eid Mubarak!

Go to Source

Author:

Government must increase support for asylum seekers

The latest Immigration Statistics, published this morning, show that 51,906 people are waiting for an initial decision on their asylum claims, an increase of 33% since last year. 31,516 have been waiting for more than six months, a 68% increase.

People who've come to the UK having fled war or persecution should be welcomed, not trapped for months on just £5.39 a day

Currently, asylum seekers are banned from working while they wait for a decision and forced to rely on asylum support payments of only £37.75 a week – just £5.39 a day.

All of our MPs have written jointly to the Home Secretary urging her to increase asylum support by £20 a week during the coronavirus crisis – in line with the increase to Universal Credit. This matches calls from charities Refugee Action, the Salvation Army and others.

In the letter, we also called for asylum seekers to be given the right to work if they are waiting for a decision for more than three months.

This would allow them to fill essential roles during the pandemic, as well as to support themselves, integrate in their communities and contribute through taxation.

Our Home Affairs Spokesperson, Christine Jardine said:

"The coronavirus crisis is leaving the most vulnerable in our society at risk. We must ensure no one is left behind.

People who've come to the UK having fled war or persecution should be welcomed with compassion and enabled to contribute to our society, not trapped for months on just £5.39 a day – especially now during this pandemic.

The way the Home Office is treating these vulnerable people is appalling and unacceptable. The Government must urgently increase support for asylum seekers in line with the emergency increase for people on Universal Credit.

Ministers should also finally give asylum seekers the right to work, allowing them to fill essential roles during the pandemic, as well as giving them a sense of dignity, more money and the ability to contribute to the economy."

Christine A. Jardine MP
Edinburgh West

HOUSE OF COMMONS
LONDON SW1A 0AA

The Rt. Hon Priti Patel MP
Home Office
2 Marsham Street
London SW1P 4DF

7th May 2020

Dear Priti,

Support for asylum seekers during the coronavirus crisis

We the undersigned are writing to urge you to provide further support to those seeking asylum during the ongoing coronavirus pandemic.

During this difficult and unprecedented time, it is important that the most vulnerable members of our society are protected and supported. This includes those seeking sanctuary from war and persecution.

When people come to the UK having fled war or persecution, we should welcome them with compassion and enable them to contribute to our society. Instead, those seeking asylum face long waiting times for decisions on their application, they are unable to work, living in crowded conditions and reliant on a handout of less than £40 a week.

Numerous charities have raised concerns that those seeking asylum are being made to live in conditions that make observing official social distancing guidelines impossible. The Public Law Project has said that failure to move individuals who have been granted Section 95 support to alternative living arrangements is unlawful as it falls far short of compliance with social distancing regulations set out in current guidance. The Home Office must urgently make sure that people can properly self-isolate, socially distance and maintain their hygiene in line with vital government advice.

The charity Refugee Action has found that at this time people are struggling even more to get by on inadequate asylum support payments. The already substantial challenge of living on £5.39 per day is made more acute; ASPEN cards are only uploaded with subsistence support weekly, making it very difficult for people in the asylum system to buy food and other essentials in sufficient quantity to minimise trips or prepare for self-isolation. Those seeking asylum may be housed a significant distance from large supermarkets and local shops, requiring the expense of a long journey for each shopping trip. With support services on which people usually rely closed, people seeking asylum are having to make choices between food and medicine.

In the context of the current pandemic, the Home Office must urgently ensure that asylum support rates also receive the same £20 COVID-related uplift as other mainstream benefits.

Furthermore, as a permanent solution, asylum seekers must be allowed to work after three months. This would vastly improve integration, help people rebuild their lives, and save the taxpayer millions in support payments. These policies will help people seeking asylum to meet their needs both during this pandemic and beyond.

We look forward to receiving your response. We must all work together to ensure that people seeking asylum can avoid danger and destitution during the coronavirus crisis and beyond.

Yours sincerely,

Christine Jardine MP

Alistair Carmichael MP
Wendy Chamberlain MP
Daisy Cooper MP
Ed Davey MP

Tim Farron MP
Wera Hobhouse MP
Layla Moran MP
Sarah Olney MP

Jamie Stone MP
Munira Wilson MP

Go to Source

Author:

The Government must extend the Brexit transition period

Today we have introduced a Bill to require the Government to seek a two-year extension to the Brexit transition period, in light of the Coronavirus pandemic.

To choose a No Deal Brexit and crash out, when the option to extend the transition is possible, would be an act of national self-harm – especially when our NHS, economy and food supply chains are already stretched and struggling.

To crash out of the Brexit transition period when our NHS & economy are already stretched due to COVID-19, would be unthinkable

Speaking ahead of the Bill's presentation, Liberal Democrat Acting Leader Ed Davey said:

"It is clear the government have not made nearly enough progress on the Brexit trade talks.

To crash out of the Brexit transition period when our NHS & economy are already stretched due to COVID-19, would be unthinkable.

It is time the Prime Minister did the right thing. That is why Liberal Democrats are today presenting legislation that would enable the government to seek an extension to the transition period."

To crash out of the Brexit transition period when our NHS & economy are already stretched due to COVID-19, would be unthinkable.

While Gove has admitted there will be checks on goods going from Britain to NI, there is still significant detail lacking in these documents.

With just weeks to go until the deadline, the Government must extend the transition period as a priority.

<https://t.co/I8z6e5laPm>

– Liberal Democrats (@LibDems) May 20, 2020

European Union Withdrawal (Implementation Period) Bill:

A Bill to require Her Majesty's Government to seek a two-year extension of the implementation period under Article 132 of the Withdrawal Agreement; to repeal the prohibition on agreeing to such an extension under section 33 of the European Union (Withdrawal Agreement) Act 2020; and for connected purposes.

The Presentation Bill will face its second reading on 12th June 2020. However, the extension request has to be made by the UK before the end of June.

With just weeks to go until this deadline, it is clear that the Government must extend the transition period as a priority.

Go to Source

Author:

New Liberal Democrat leader elected this August

Last week, we published the frank independent review into the 2019 general election. It rightly received plaudits in the media for its candour.

This review challenges us to change as a party and to change the country for the better.

We now need to get on with that work – and that's what we've done with a set of key decisions by your Federal Board.

Go to Source

Author:

International Day Against Homophobia, Transphobia, Biphobia

In the midst of the Covid 19 crisis it is easy to think it is the only issue in town. But there is another issue that as Liberals we should not need reminding of.

One aspect of it was highlighted to me this week when a friend told me that he cannot give blood.

My friend would like to help by providing blood from which plasma could be used in the fight against COVID-19 but regardless of how rare his blood group might be, of how healthy he is, he cannot donate because he is gay.

I was stunned.

We must surely recognise that there are still elements of our lives which label and marginalise the LGBTQ community

So I checked and, to be fair, the NHS site says all men must wait 3 months after having sex with another man before donating. It doesn't claim to be a ban, and says it is regardless of sexuality. But the reality is that as someone in a long term committed single-sex relationship that almost automatically excludes him.

And it is not the only example.

More than once in the past three years I have pressed the Government to fulfill the promise of its LGBT action plan and ban gay conversion therapy.

Today is International Day against Homophobia, Transphobia, and Biphobia.

I would not suggest for a minute that safeguards to ensure donated blood is healthy is by its nature homophobic. I cannot say the same about the lack of a ban on gay conversion therapy.

We must surely recognise that there are still elements of our lives which label and marginalise the LGBTQ community and that this is one of them.

As Liberals we should be aware of the danger of assuming that everybody feels equally respected and protected in the current crisis. These past two months have posed problems for us all that we never thought we would have to face, and demanded strength we did not know that we had.

But we are not there yet.

In striving to reach that moment we would do well to remember the words of US politician Daniel Patrick Moynihan:

"The central conservative truth is that it is culture, not politics, that determines the success of a society.

The central liberal truth is that politics can change a culture and save it from itself."

That is the task we must set ourselves.

Go to Source

Author: