

ECJ paper shows May's red lines becoming more blurred by the day

The government has released its latest Brexit position paper on the role of the EU Court of Justice (ECJ) after Brexit.

Go to Source

Author:

Brexit 'no deal' would make it harder to return abducted children to UK parents

British officials have admitted it will become harder to recover children abducted and taken out of the country by a parent if no Brexit deal is struck with the EU.

Go to Source

Author:

Hunt's promise to recruit 5,000 GPs lies in tatters

The Liberal Democrats have warned that the government's promise to recruit 5,000 more GPs "lies in tatters," after figures showed the number of GPs remains below that in September 2015.

Go to Source

Author:

Government's support for Trump on Afghanistan contrasts with failure to condemn him in the past

Donald Trump has committed to send more troops to Afghanistan, in a move that was rapidly welcomed by Defence Secretary Michael Fallon. The Government's rapid praise for Trump contrasted with its failure to condemn him in the past.

Go to Source

Author:

Osborne is right to take on May over Northern Powerhouse

I'm backing George Osborne in the row with Theresa May over HS3. He's accused her advisers of trying to bury the Northern Powerhouse.

Go to Source

Author: