

Foster and O'Neill condemn attack on life of part-time police officer

First Minister Arlene Foster and deputy First Minister Michelle O'Neill have condemned an attempt on the life of a part-time police officer in Dungiven.

---

Long: Reckless attack could have had devastating consequences

Justice Minister Naomi Long has condemned those responsible for planting an explosive device at the car of a young mother and part-time police officer in Dungiven.

---

Weir welcomes further £4.83m Engage funding

Education Minister Peter Weir has announced a further £4.83m for the Engage Programme's school funding allocation, bringing the overall funding to £16m.

---

Conversion Therapy must end – Hargey

Speaking today in the Assembly, Communities Minister Deirdre Hargey said that so called 'conversion therapy' is a cruel and inhumane practice and it should be ended.

---

Views sought on pre-school education admissions criteria

A public consultation seeking views on pre-school admissions has been launched today.