Teresa Pearce responds to NAO report on 100 per cent business rate retention scheme

Teresa Pearce, Shadow Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government, responding to the National Audit Office report on the 100 percent business rate retention scheme, said:

"Today's report confirms what we have long suspected: the Government is playing dangerous games with local government finances, and in turn, is putting our vital public services in jeopardy.

"The NAO have stated that implementing 100 per cent business rates retention before the Government's Fair Funding Review has been published will result in an untested and potentially unfair system being imposed on already struggling councils. In the context of seven years of brutal and relentless cuts to local government, that is a risk that councils cannot afford. That is why Labour has continually called for 100 per cent business rate retention to be delayed until after the Fair Funding Review is complete.

"The report also finds that the research has not been done into whether business rate retention is genuinely driving economic growth, and the resources do not exist to do so sufficiently. As it stands, this scheme is ideologically-driven but lacks any solid evidence base.

"Local government is facing a £5.8billion funding gap by 2020. There is a national crisis in social care with 1.2million frail elderly people and one in five vulnerable disabled people being left lonely and isolated. Libraries, youth centres and Sure Start centres have closed. Child protection services are creaking, and homelessness is rising. Public services provided by local councils are the lifeblood of our communities and the Government must think more carefully before implementing these potentially catastrophic changes."

The Government should tackle 'burning injustices' many young people face & get on with helping young people find a job — Debbie Abrahams

Debbie

Abrahams MP, Shadow Work and Pensions Secretary, commenting on the Work and Pensions Select Committee's report on the youth obligation, said:

"The

current headline employment figures mask shocking barriers faced by some groups in our society trying to find a job. Sadly there is even evidence of direct discrimination."

"The

Government's own statistics show a wide gap in employment between different regions, and the evidence points to major disadvantages faced by women, BME groups and disabled people."

"The Government should stop patting themselves on the back, fix their broken Universal Credit roll out, tackle the 'burning injustices' many young people face and get on with helping young people find a job."

WATCH: Tusk's response to the Article 50 letter. "What can I add to this? We already miss you."

Published: March 29, 2017

Brexit Donald Tusk EU Europe

21 comments for: WATCH: Tusk's response to the Article 50 letter. "What can I add to this? We already miss you."

Green Party: Triggering of Article 50 sets us on dangerous path towards extreme Brexit

29 March 2017

The Green Party has responded to Article 50 being triggered today.

Molly Scott Cato, MEP for the South West and Green Party EU spokesperson, said:

"The triggering of Article 50 today, after the Bill passed without amendments, sets us on a dangerous path towards an extreme Brexit. The toxic combination of a Conservative Party hell bent on ejecting us into the wilderness and a Labour party utterly unwilling to offer principled opposition has led to this cliff edge, and only a distinct change from both will enable us to avoid the dangers that lie ahead.

"What happens next will define this country for a generation or more, as we enter the most important peacetime negotiations in Britain's recent history. The Green Party will continue to oppose an extreme Brexit — which is why I have fought against triggering Article 50 every step of the way. We will pressure this Government to guarantee the rights of EU nationals living here, protect our environment and workers' rights and safeguard our communities from the damaging effects of losing access to EU markets. Alongside Green Parties from across Europe we will continue to make the case for continent-wide solidarity in the face of politicians trying to pull us apart."

Tweet

Back to main news page

Let's block ads! (Why?)

Jeremy Corbyn statement to the House on the triggering of Article 50

CHECK AGAINST DELIVERY

Mr Speaker,

Ι

would like to thank the Prime Minister for the advance copy of her statement.

Today

we embark on the country's most important negotiations in modern times.

The

British people made the decision to leave the European Union and Labour respects that decision.

The

next steps along this journey are the most crucial and if the Prime Minister is to unite this country, as she says she aims to do the Government needs to listen, consult and represent the whole country, not just the hard-line Tory ideologues on her own benches.

Britain is going to change as a result of leaving the European Union. The question is how. The Conservatives want to use Brexit to turn our country into a low wage tax haven.

Labour is determined to invest in a high skill, high tech, high wage future, to rebuild and transform Britain, so no one and no community is left behind.

Mr

Speaker, the direction the Prime Minister is threatening to take this Country is both reckless and damaging and Labour will not give this Government a free hand to use Brexit to attack rights and protections, cut services and create a tax dodgers' paradise.

So

let me be clear, the Prime Minister says that no deal is better than a bad deal but the reality is; no deal is a bad deal.

Less than a year ago the Treasury estimated that leaving the European Union on World

Trade Organisation terms would lead to a 7.5 per cent fall in GDP and a £45 billion loss of tax receipts.

Has

the Treasury updated those figures or do they still stand? If updated, can they be published? If not, what deal could be worse than those consequences of 'no deal'?

Ιt

would be a national failure of historic proportions if the Prime Minister comes back from Brussels without having secured protection for jobs and living standards.

So

we will use every parliamentary opportunity to ensure the Government is held to account at every stage of the negotiations.

Mr

Speaker,

We

all have an interest in ensuring the Prime Minister gets the best deal for this country.

To

safeguard jobs and living standards Britain needs full access to the single market.

The

Secretary of State for exiting the EU seems to agree with this. He stated in this House on 24 January the Government's plan is a:

"comprehensive free trade agreement and a comprehensive customs agreement that will deliver the exact same benefits as we have"

That

is what they have pledged. So will the Prime Minister confirm today, that she intends to deliver a trade and customs agreement with "the exact same benefits"?

The

same goes for protecting workers' rights and environmental standards, protecting Britain's nations and regions, protecting Britain's financial sector and services and making sure there is no return to a hard border in Northern Ireland.

And

when does she expect to be able to guarantee the rights of all those EU nationals who live, work and contribute to this country?

And

for those British nationals who live in the EU, including guaranteeing their UK pensions will not be frozen post-Brexit?

Mr

Speaker, Brexit would be a huge task for any government.

Yet

so far they seem utterly complacent about the scale of the task ahead and government ministers can't make up their minds about their real objectives.

The

Foreign Secretary said in October: "Our policy is having our cake and eating it."

Today

the Chancellor said: "We can't have our cake and eat it."

These

might seem flippant exchanges from ministers, but these reflect serious differences about Britain's negotiating aims.

The

Government must speak with a united voice.

The

Foreign Secretary is the same man who promised our NHS £350 million pounds a week once we left the EU.

Now

he believes that leaving the EU without a deal would be "perfectly ok".

Ιt

would not be "perfectly OK". It would damage our economy and people's living standards.

Will

the Prime Minister confirm she rejects such complacency?

Labour

has set out our tests for this Government's Brexit negotiations

And

we will use all means possible to make sure we hold the Government to their word on full access to the single market, on protecting Britain from being dragged into a race to the bottom, and ensuring our future relationship with the EU is strong and co-operative.

Α

relationship where we can work together to bring prosperity and peace to our continent.

Ιf

the Prime Minister can deliver a deal that meets our tests, we will back her.

More

than ever, Britain needs a government that will deliver for the whole country, not just the few.

And

that is the ultimate test of the Brexit deal that the Prime Minister must now secure.

Ends