

War Detectives to trace descendants following return of partial WW1 casualty remains

The partial remains of 72 British soldiers who served and died during the First World War have been returned to France from a museum collection.