

World's first mobile quantum brain scanner being developed to measure blast effects on troops

Government provides £3.1m for transformational tech which will assess how blast exposure from weapons training affects the brain to better protect personnel.